Sparky Anderson

Sparky Anderson is more than a major league baseball manager with charisma. He's got the figures to back up his reputation.

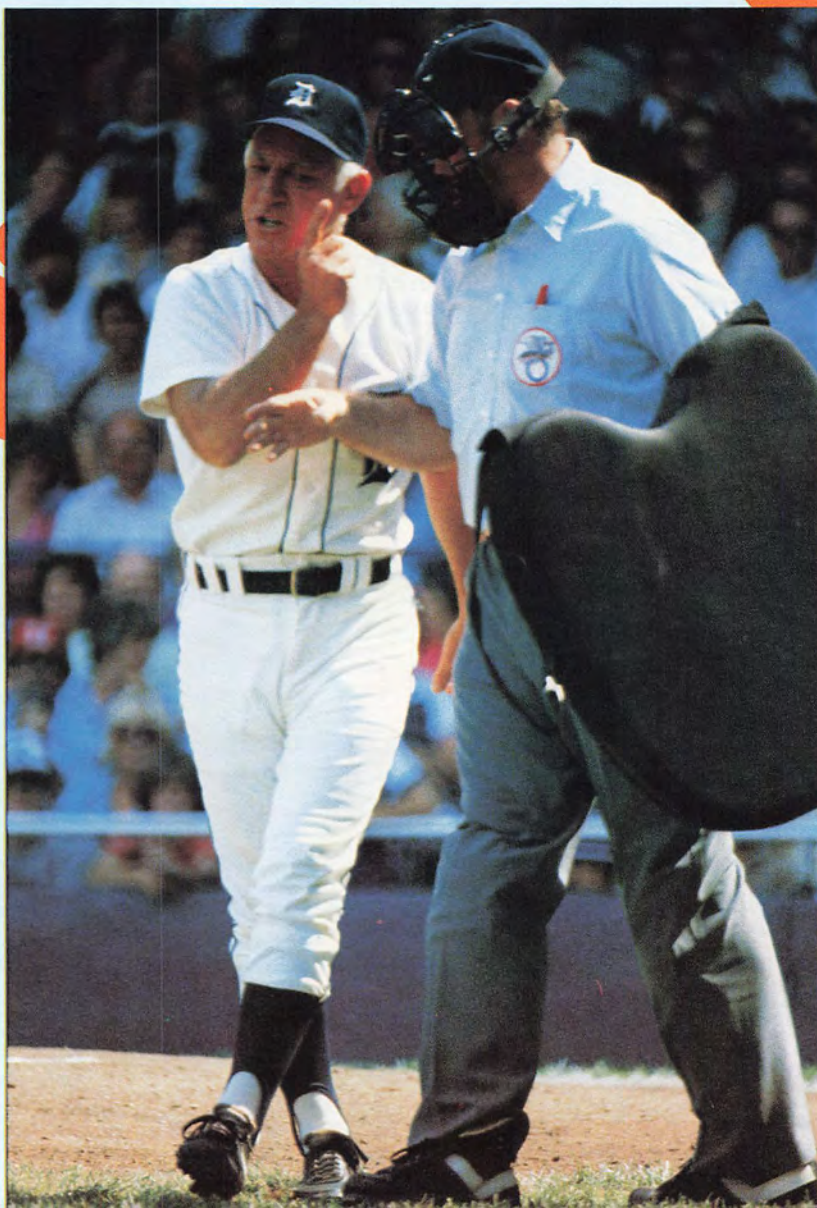

At the start of the 1983 season, Anderson had the highest winning percentage among major league managers currently in the game.

His record in 13 years — the last four with Detroit — showed 1,146 victories and 842 losses for a .576 percentage. That is good for eighth on the all-time ML list for those with at least 10 years experience.

Anderson's victory total was third on the list among current managers behind former Tiger manager Ralph Houk, now with Boston, and San Diego's Dick Williams.

Anderson joined the Tigers on June 14, 1979, and his contract runs through 1984. Before joining the Tigers, the two-time National League Manager of the Year directed the Cincinnati Reds to an 863-586 mark between 1970 and 1978.

The 49-year-old one time Philadelphia Phillies infielder (1959) was born in Bridgewater, S.D., but raised in California. He lives in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

BILLY CONSOLO

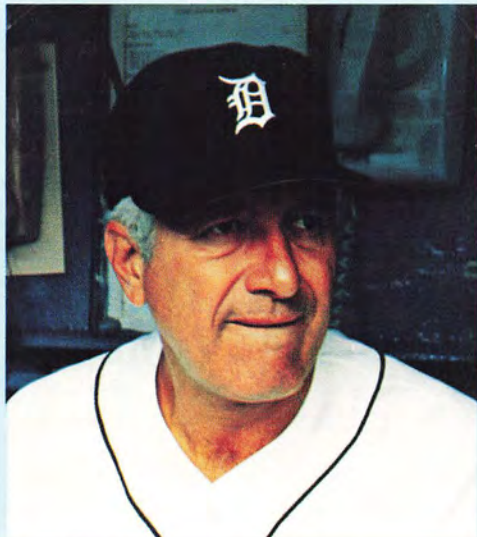

The Coaches

GATES BROWN

DICK TRACEWSKI

ALEX GRAMMAS

While the manager usually is the one who gets the attention, he knows he must have a top-drawer staff of coaches. They must be talented at not only molding young up-and-comers, but also motivating veterans.

Anderson is blessed with six of the finer coaches in Gates Brown, Billy Consolo, Roger Craig, Alex Grammas, and Dick Tracewski.

Tracewski has been with the Tigers the longest — since 1972 — while Brown is next in Detroit seniority, having joined the Tigers in 1978. Consolo came aboard in 1979, while Craig and Grammas both became Tiger coaches in 1980.

Grammas (Milwaukee, 1976-77) and Craig (San Diego, 1978-79) both have been managers in the majors.

ROGER CRAIG

In the 1982 All-Star game, baseball fans all over the country watching on TV discovered what Detroit Tiger followers have known for a long time — Lance Parrish is quite a player.

The muscular catcher from Yorba Linda, Calif., threw out three of four runners attempting to steal, to set an All-Star record. He also doubled and made a fine running catch of a pop foul.

Tiger brass saw such future stardom in Parrish back in 1974 when they made him their No. 1 pick in the June draft. Now he's Detroit's Most Valuable Player, an honor accorded him by the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association for his 1982 performance.

Parrish set an American League record for catchers by clubbing 32 home runs. After missing 10 games at the start of the season due to a sprained tendon in his left hand, he hit just .100 in April. But he rebounded with .365 in May and was on his way to a .284 average and 87 runs-batted-in, plus 10 game-winning hits.

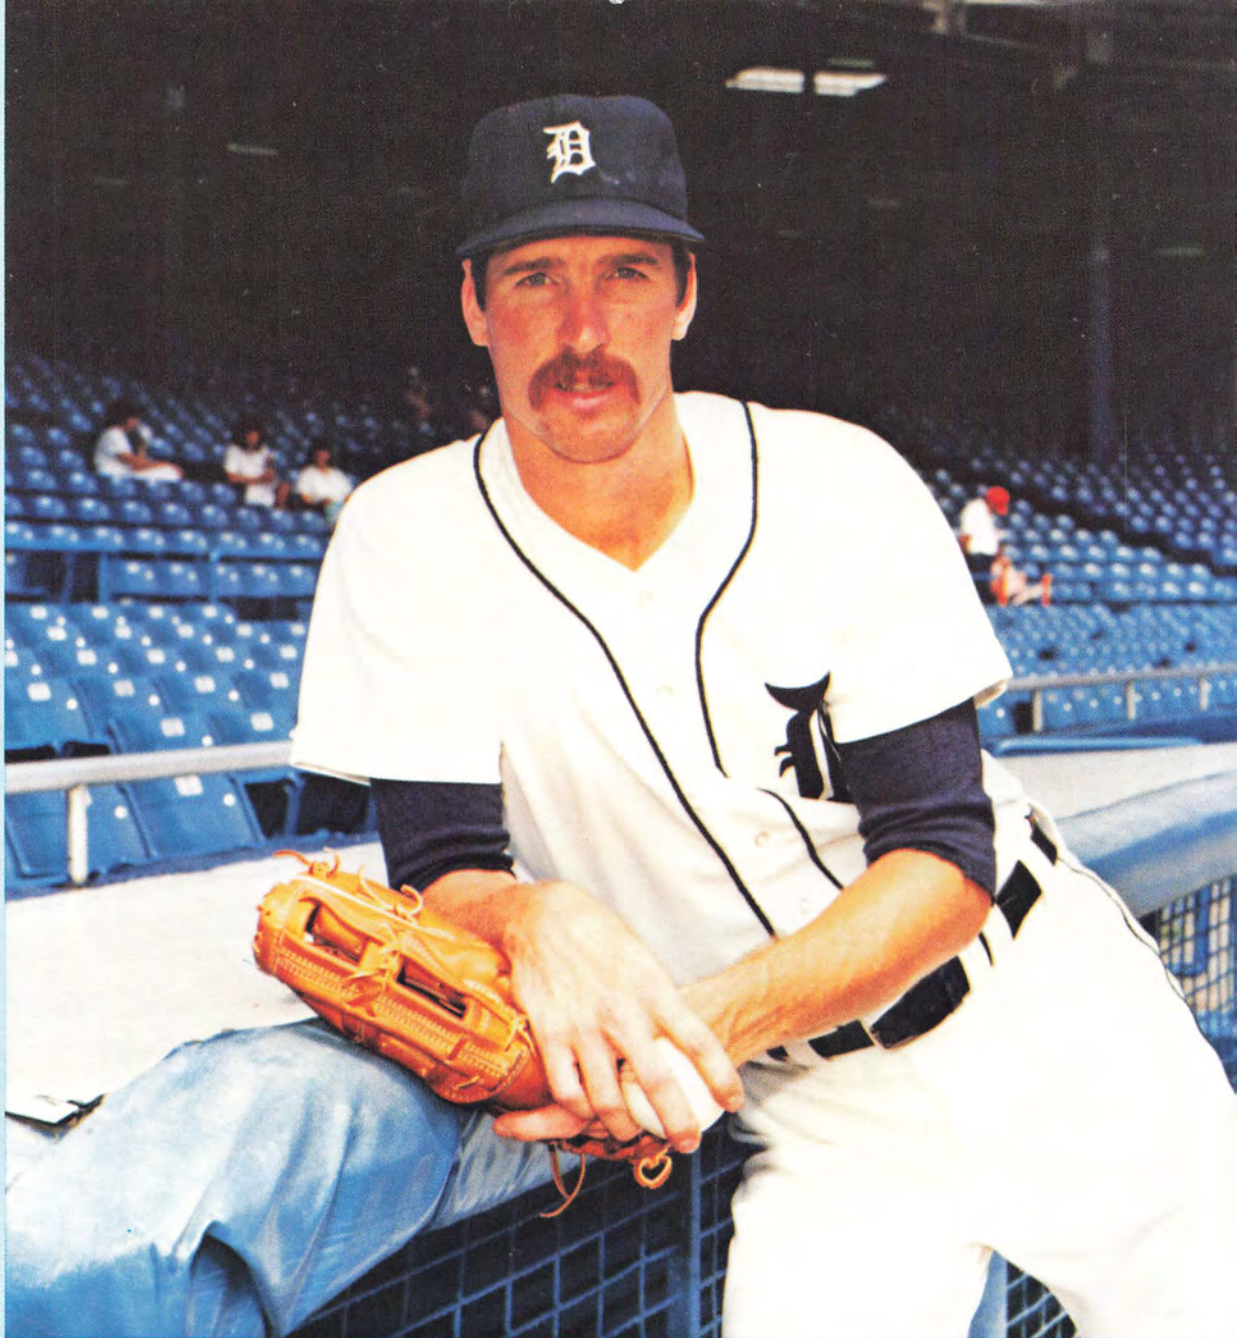

The 26-year-old right-handed hitter worked his way up to the Detroit regular roster by late 1977. He became a full-time starter in 1979 and has developed into one of the best catchers in the game.

The former high school football All-American spurned a UCLA football scholarship to sign with the Tigers.

Lance Parrish

Jack Morris

He has yet to win 20 games, but hardly anyone doubts the rangy right-handed pitcher from St. Paul, Minn., will do it.

In the last four seasons he's won 17 games twice, 16 once, and 14 once. In leading the Tigers in victories the last four years. Morris equalled a club record set by Frank Lary (1958-61). Last year he had personal highs of 37 games, 37 starts, 17 complete games, three shutouts, 266 $\frac{1}{3}$ innings pitched, and 133 strikeouts.

The 27-year-old former Brigham Young University student, Detroit's fifth selection in the 1976 June draft, consistently ranks among league leaders in numerous important categories. Last season he had a two-hitter and pair of four hitters.

Morris was the All-Star game starter for the AL in 1981 and finished third in Cy Young Award balloting.

Morris, who utilizes an excellent fastball and slider, made his Detroit debut in only his second pro season, 1977. Except for a brief stint at Evansville in 1979, Morris has been a Detroit fixture for five years.

Larry Herndon

Talk about great first impressions! After a solid but unspectacular six-year career with the San Francisco Giants, Herndon moved to the American League last year and became one of the most outstanding and consistent Tigers.

The right-handed hitting outfielder, a former Tennessee State University student, enjoyed his finest season with personal highs in nearly every batting category. He hit .292, with 614 at bats, 92 runs, 179 hits, 21 doubles, 23 homers, and 88 RBI. He even stole 12 bases, had a 17-game hitting streak, and tied a major league record by hitting four home runs in consecutive plate appearances.

But while hitting statistics are the easiest to document, in left field Herndon also was sensational. He covered a lot of ground and made many potential hits appear to be routine outs. He also made two game-saving, over-the-fence catches.

Herndon, acquired in December, 1981, in the trade that sent Dan Schatzeder and Mike Chris to the Giants, was The Sporting News' National League Rookie of the Year in 1976. He was San Francisco's MVP in 1981.

Löwenbräu.
Here's to good friends.

Dan Petry

For the third straight season, Petry last year had the lowest earned-run-average on the Tigers, 3.22. That went along with a fine 15-9 record.

The 6-4, 200-pound right-hander from Anaheim Hills, Calif., has become one of the better pitchers in the league and, at only 24, could become a stalwart starter for many years to come.

A fourth-round draft choice in June, 1976, Petry earned his way onto the Tigers roster in 1979 and since then has posted a 41-32 record and 3.46 composite ERA.

Last season Petry, who started 35 games and totaled 246 innings, had a pair of two-hit games, as well as two four-hitters. He struck out 10 batters in seven innings against Chicago in May and owned a 9-2 record at Tiger Stadium.

Besides his pitching prowess, Petry has become one of the finest defensive moundsmen in the game. In 1982 he fielded 1,000, with no errors in 76 chances — best performance in the league.

If he ever can avoid injuries which have plagued his four-year major league career, Gibson could put some phenomenal hitting statistics on the books.

The left-handed hitting outfielder has displayed raw power that has excited Tiger fans since he broke in with Detroit in September, 1979.

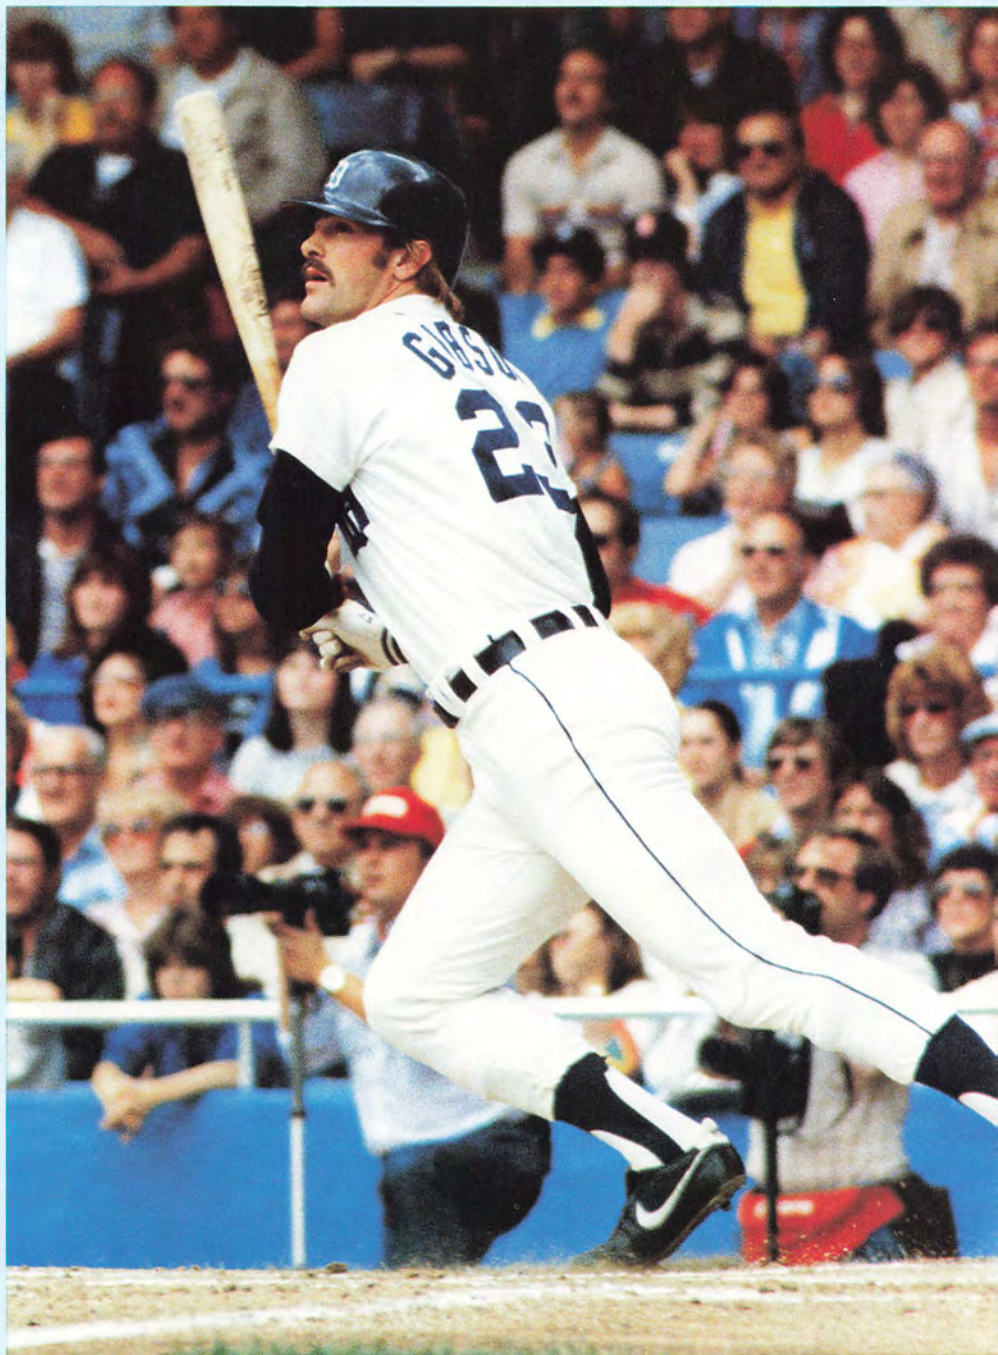

But injuries, particularly a severe left wrist injury first suffered in June, 1980, have soured his progress.

Last year he was limited to 69 games, having been sidelined by a sore left knee, strained left calf muscle, stomach ailment, and once again the left wrist problem.

He was on the disabled list from July 15 to the end of the season.

Early in the season Gibson had a 12-game hitting streak. He had a four-hit game and six three-hit games. Despite the partial season, he collected six game-winning hits, eight homers, 16 doubles, 35 RBI, and 25 walks, plus a .278 average in 266 at bats.

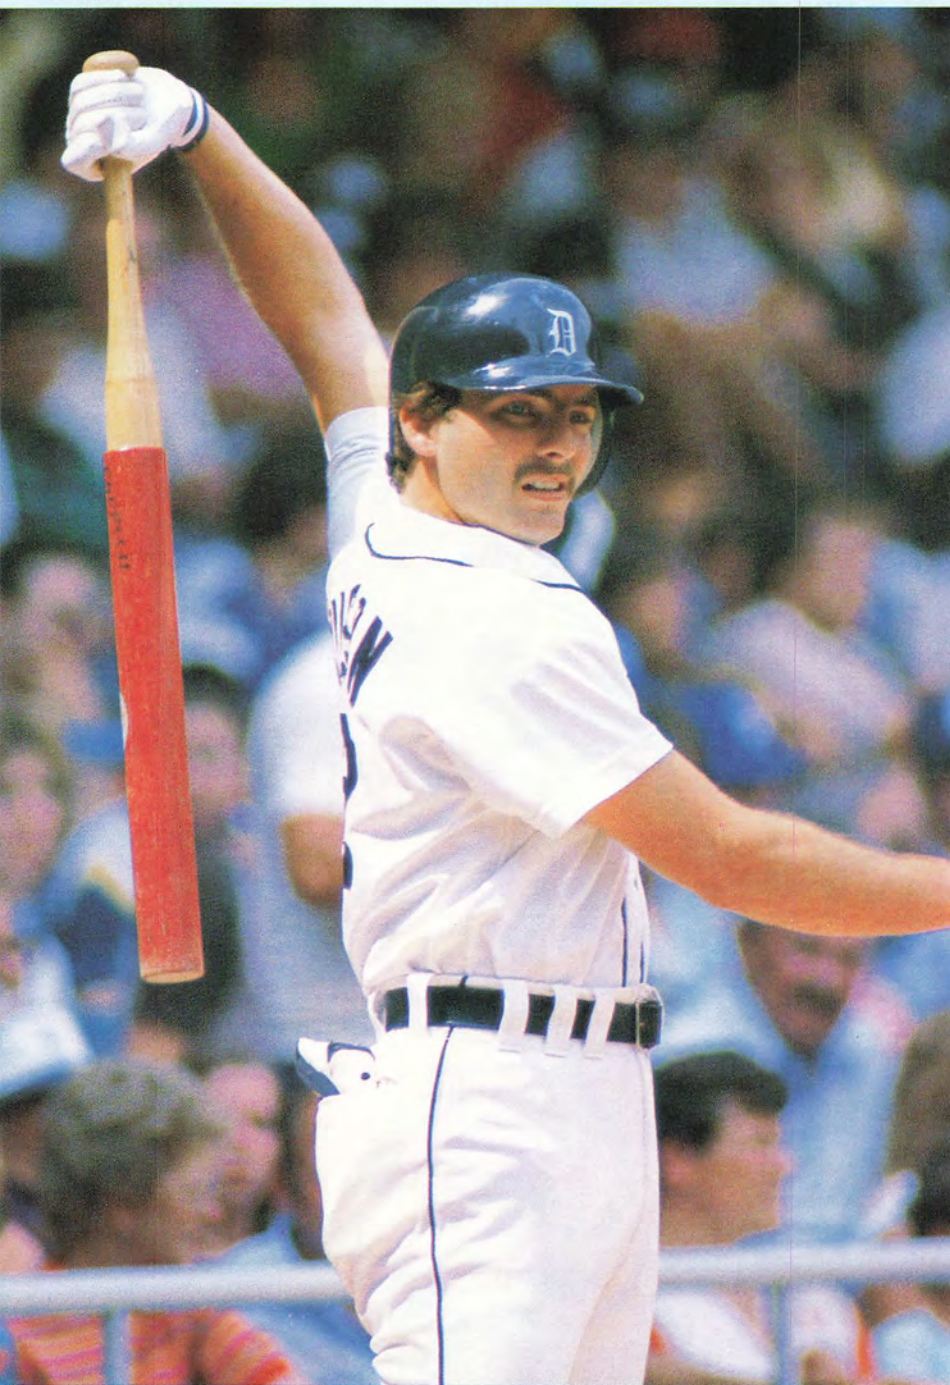

An All-American football wide receiver at Michigan State, the 6-3, 215-pound Pontiac, Mich., native was Detroit's No. 1 choice in the June, 1978, draft after playing just one year of college baseball as the Spartans' center fielder.

Kirk Gibson

Glenn Wilson

Big things always are expected from No. 1 draft choices, but my how Wilson moved fast.

Detroit's top pick in June, 1980, the right-handed hitting outfielder (who was signed as a third baseman) found himself playing for the Tigers last year in only his second full season as a professional.

And the 24-year-old Texan didn't just "play." He became an immediate standout, earning Tiger Rookie of the Year honors from the Detroit Sports Broadcasters Association.

The Tigers bought his contract from Evansville on April 14, 1982, and he spent three weeks with Detroit before being sent back to the Triplets. But he was recalled July 15 and became a fixture in the lineup, finishing with a .292 average, with 12 home runs and 34

RBI, as well as making numerous fine defensive plays, both in right and center fields.

Wilson was hospitalized briefly with severe back pains due to acute muscle strain, but was back in the lineup after eight days.

Wilson was a two-time baseball All-American at Sam Houston State University and All-Conference in football.

Lou Whitaker

How could a 5-11, 160-pounder find the upper deck in right center field so often? Who knows, but Whitaker did. And he wound up with 15 home runs last year.

Add the dimension of power to his already large array of talents and it becomes clear how valuable a player "Sweet Lou" is.

He hit .286, set a team record with 11 game-winning hits, drove in 65 runs, and led American League second basemen with a .988 fielding percentage.

Whew!!

He even stole 11 bases, including home at Milwaukee during a game in September.

Since being given the job of leadoff hitter last July 6, he batted .309. He had four hits in one game in August and five RBI in another game that month.

The 25-year-old left-handed hitter, signed by the Tigers as the fifth selection in the June, 1975, draft, joined Detroit in September, 1977, along with shortstop Alan Trammell. The two have been entrenched at the keystone corner ever since.

Known as one of the finest fielding shortstops in the majors, Trammell needs only to develop some hitting consistency to become a truly great player.

If he'd have been able to put together the same type of statistics in the first half of 1982 as he did in the second half, he would have been a shoo-in as the best shortstop in the league.

The 25-year-old right-handed hitter from San Diego hit just .201 the first half of the campaign. Then he hit .310 the rest of the way, giving him a .258 average for the second consecutive year — after having been a .300 hitter in 1980.

But there's no doubt about his solid overall ability and hardly is there a mention of his name without including keystone partner, second baseman Lou Whitaker.

Last year Trammell finished second in the AL in fielding percentage among shortstops (.978). He smashed two grand slams among his pro high of nine homers.

Trammell's career batting average is .272 and, in five full seasons, he has averaged only 16 errors a year.

Alan Trammell

John Wockenfuss

It is difficult enough for a regular to hit .300, but when a utility player does it, that player has got to be someone special.

And Wockenfuss is just that.

Last season Wockenfuss, the oldest Tiger in term of service (nine years) batted .301, appearing in 70 games and getting 193 at bats. He was used as: a catcher, first baseman, third baseman, designated hitter, and pinch hitter. Usually, he also plays some in the outfield.

The 34-year-old right-handed hitter from Delaware (but a Pennsylvania resident) batted .333 as a DH and .364 as a pinch hitter. He had back-to-back pinch homers against Baltimore and hit .483 (14 for 29) from Sept. 1 to the end of the season.

Wockenfuss, who assumed his unusual batting stance while playing in Puerto Rico in the winter of 1976, was obtained by Detroit from St. Louis in December, 1973. He first was called up from the minors in 1974, finally sticking for good in 1976.

"Fuss" broke into pro ball in 1967 after rejecting college football and track scholarships.

WELCOME to Miller Time

Jerry Ujdur

The 26-year-old former University of Minnesota student, Detroit's fourth selection in the June, 1978, draft, made brief appearances with the Tigers in 1980 and 1981 before earning his stripes last season.

When the Tigers were in need of a new starting pitcher last year, Ujdur got the call. And, despite a slow start (1-5 record) after being recalled June 6 from Evansville, Ujdur awarded Detroit for its patience by becoming a solid cog in the rotation.

The 6-1, 205-pound right-hander went 9-5 with a 3.58 ERA the last half of the season to finish at 10-10 with a 3.69 ERA (14th in the AL). His victory total was the best for a Tiger rookie in five years.

Ujdur, who also is from St. Paul, Minn., as is Jack Morris, ended a 10-game Tiger losing streak with a 7-1 triumph June 24 at Baltimore. He had a 5-0 record in one seven-game stretch, and wound up with one three hitter and two four hitters.

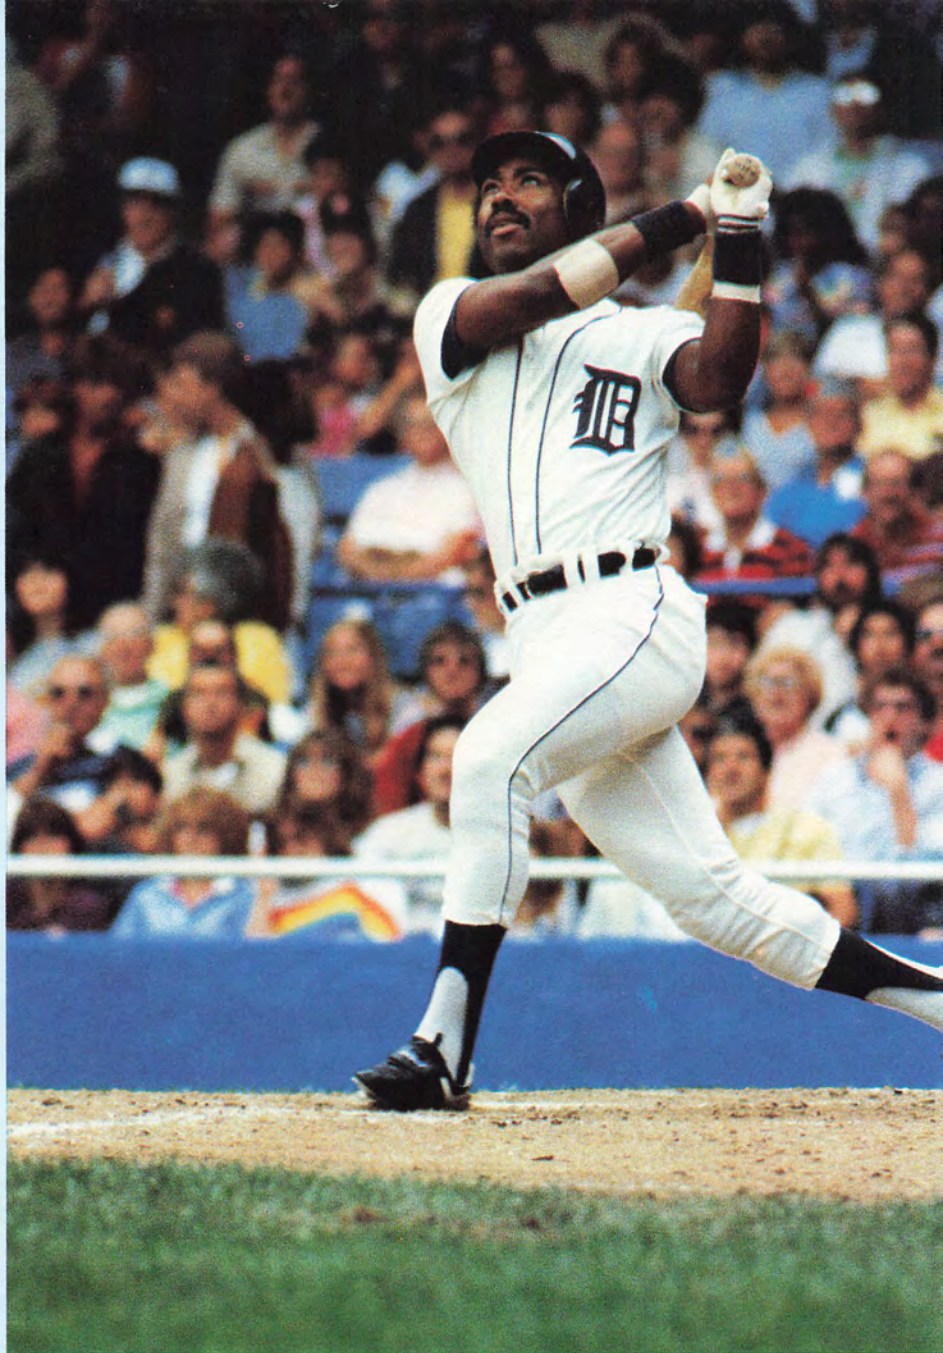

Now that he's had a season to settle down in Detroit, big things are expected from Lemon — who gave indications in the second half of the 1982 campaign what might be expected.

After a sluggish start, the right-handed hitting outfielder hit .304 in the second half of the season. His 19 homers tied his personal high in a major league career that began with the Chicago White Sox in 1975.

The 28-year-old Jackson, Miss., native, a two-time All-Star, set American League records as a center fielder in 1977 with 524 chances and 512 putouts.

The Tigers acquired Lemon in November, 1981, in a trade for Steve Kemp. Lemon's career batting average is a solid .285, with 92 homers and 400 RBI. Among his statistics are averages of .300 (1978), .318 (1979), and .302 (1981).

Lemon comes from the same high school (Freemont) in Los Angeles that sent baseball players Willie Crawford, Bob Watson, Bobby Tolan, George Hendrick, and Dan Ford to the pros, plus football's Ricky Bell and basketball's Curtis Rowe.

Chet Lemon

Tom Brookens

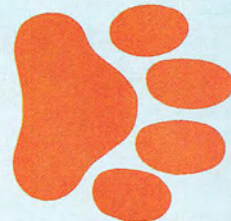

Challenges keep cropping up for the right-handed hitting third baseman from Pennsylvania. But he keeps meeting them head on. If anyone is going to take his job away, that person better be able to do everything well because Brookens has proven to be an asset both with his bat and glove.

Although he hit just .231 in 1982, he set a personal high with 10 game-winning RBI. He also had an 11-game hitting streak and a four RBI game.

Brookens played in 140 games, 113 of them at third, 26 at second, and nine at shortstop. He even played one game in the outfield. The versatility is very important to Sparky Anderson when he needs to do some lineup maneuvering.

In 3½ seasons with the Tigers, Brookens has driven in 170 runs, including 58 last year. His best season was 1981 when he hit .275 and had 66 RBI. He has cut his errors by nearly 33 percent in the last two years.

Fetzer Broadcasting Service

A Mark of Quality in Broadcasting

Enos Cabell

The veteran first and third baseman from Anaheim, Calif., is a steady ballplayer whose pleasant demeanor has made him a media favorite.

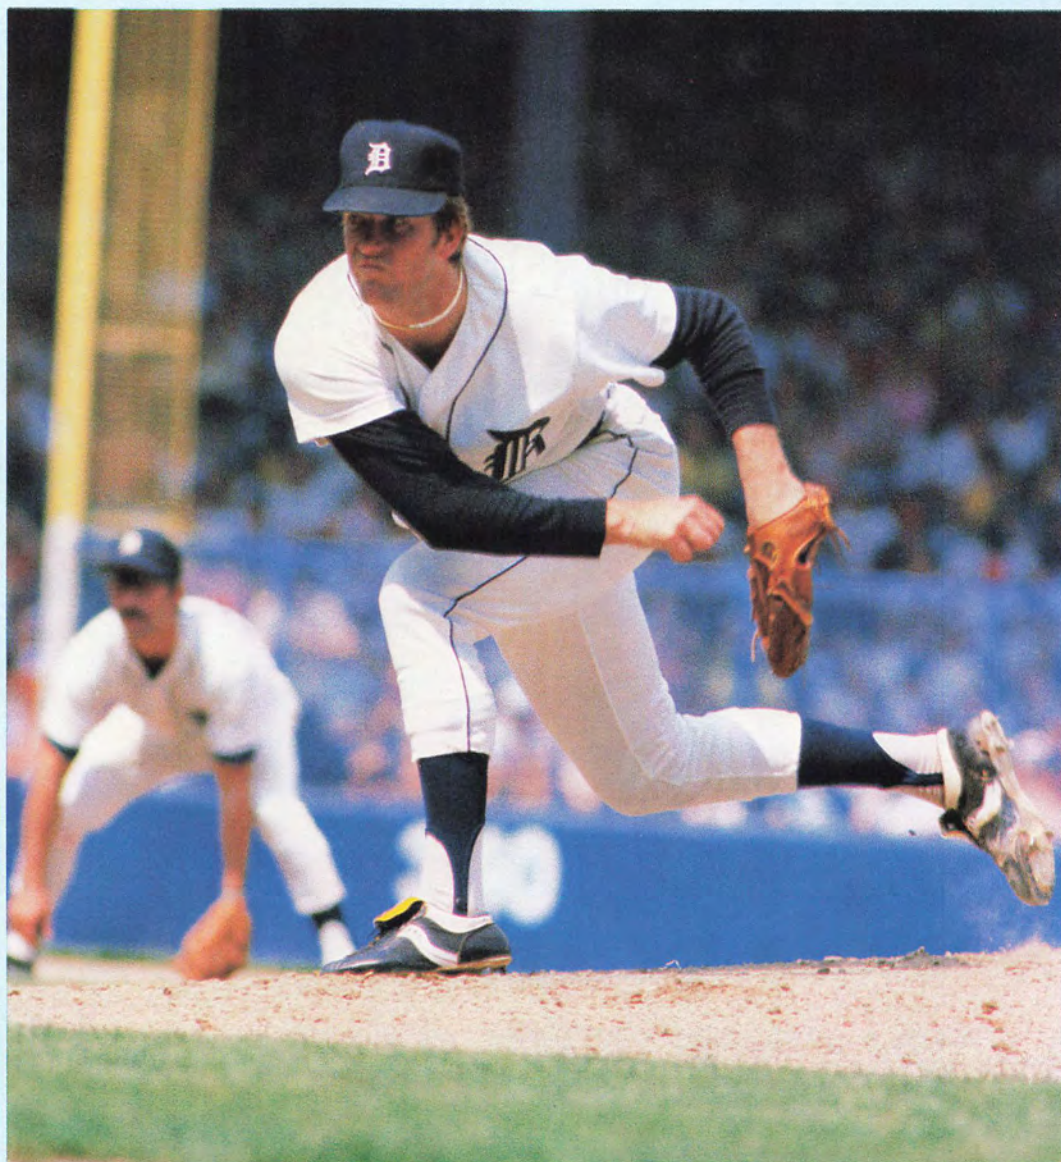

An 11-year major league veteran, Cabell didn't take long to impress Tiger fans. Acquired in March, 1982, from San Francisco for Champ Summers, Cabell batted a rousing .369 the first month of the season, including a 13-game hitting streak. Later he had a 10-game streak and wound up with a .261 average, 121 hits — including six game winners — and 15 stolen bases.

Cabell broke into the majors in 1972 with Baltimore. The Orioles traded him to Houston after the 1974 season, then the Astros sent him to San Francisco prior to the 1981 campaign.

The right-handed hitter has accumulated more than 1,200 career hits — an average of one a game — and has been to bat more than 4,500 times. The Kansas-born Cabell was the Astros' most valuable player in 1978 when he led the National League with 660 at bats and tied for the league lead in games by playing in all 162. He hit .295 and had 71 RBI that season, both career highs.

Milt Wilcox

If Wilcox could have been free of injuries in his 12-year major league career, no telling what he might have accomplished up to now. And yet, despite a variety of nagging ailments, the determined right-hander still has become one of the most reliable pitchers in the AL.

In the last five years he has won 13, 12, 13, 12, and 12 games. He is one of only 18 pitchers in Detroit's 82-year history to reach double figures in victories for five consecutive seasons.

His 3.62 ERA was 11th in the league last year. He threw a one-hit shutout against Kansas City on his 32nd birthday and had two games with nine strikeouts.

Wilcox broke a finger on his right hand in the winter before the 1982 season, but managed to overcome that. However, a sore shoulder, muscle pulls, and lower back pain plagued him. He was on the disabled list from July 19 until Aug. 13.

Several times in his pro career, which began in 1968, Wilcox battled back from injuries to become a success.

He was one of 15 players nominated this year for the Roberto Clemente Award, given to the player who best exemplifies the game on and off the field.

Detroit obtained Wilcox June 10, 1976, from the Chicago Cubs organization. He also played for Cincinnati, including in 1970 when he appeared on the Reds' World Series team, and Cleveland.

He was born in Hawaii, raised in Oklahoma, but now calls West Bloomfield, Mich., home.

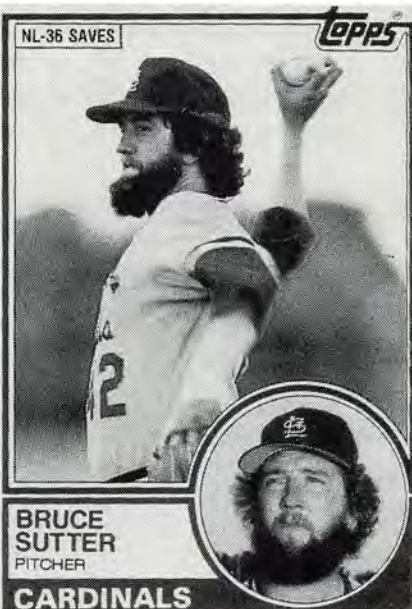

Dave Tobik

With Detroit's relief situation clouded in 1982, Tobik came to the fore to become the Tigers' most reliable pitcher out of the bullpen.

He led the team with 51 appearances and had nine saves. Although his record was just 4-9, that is deceiving since 10 decisions were in one-run games.

The 30-year-old right-hander, an Ohio University graduate from Euclid, Ohio, was the Tigers' No. 1 selection in the secondary phase of the January, 1975, draft.

He first got a taste of the major leagues with Detroit for a few games in 1978, split duties between the Tigers and Evansville the next two years, then stuck around all of the last two seasons.

Talk about future stars and Johnson's name is one of several to quickly pop up.

He's only 22, but already has his rookie season under his belt — and what a season 1982 turned out to be for the switch-hitting third baseman from Clearwater, Fla.

After progressing up the Tiger farm ladder since 1979, from Lakeland, to Birmingham, to Evansville, he got the call from Detroit last April 13. After hitting only .188 he was optioned back to Evansville on May 6, but when he was recalled Aug. 13 he made the best of the promotion.

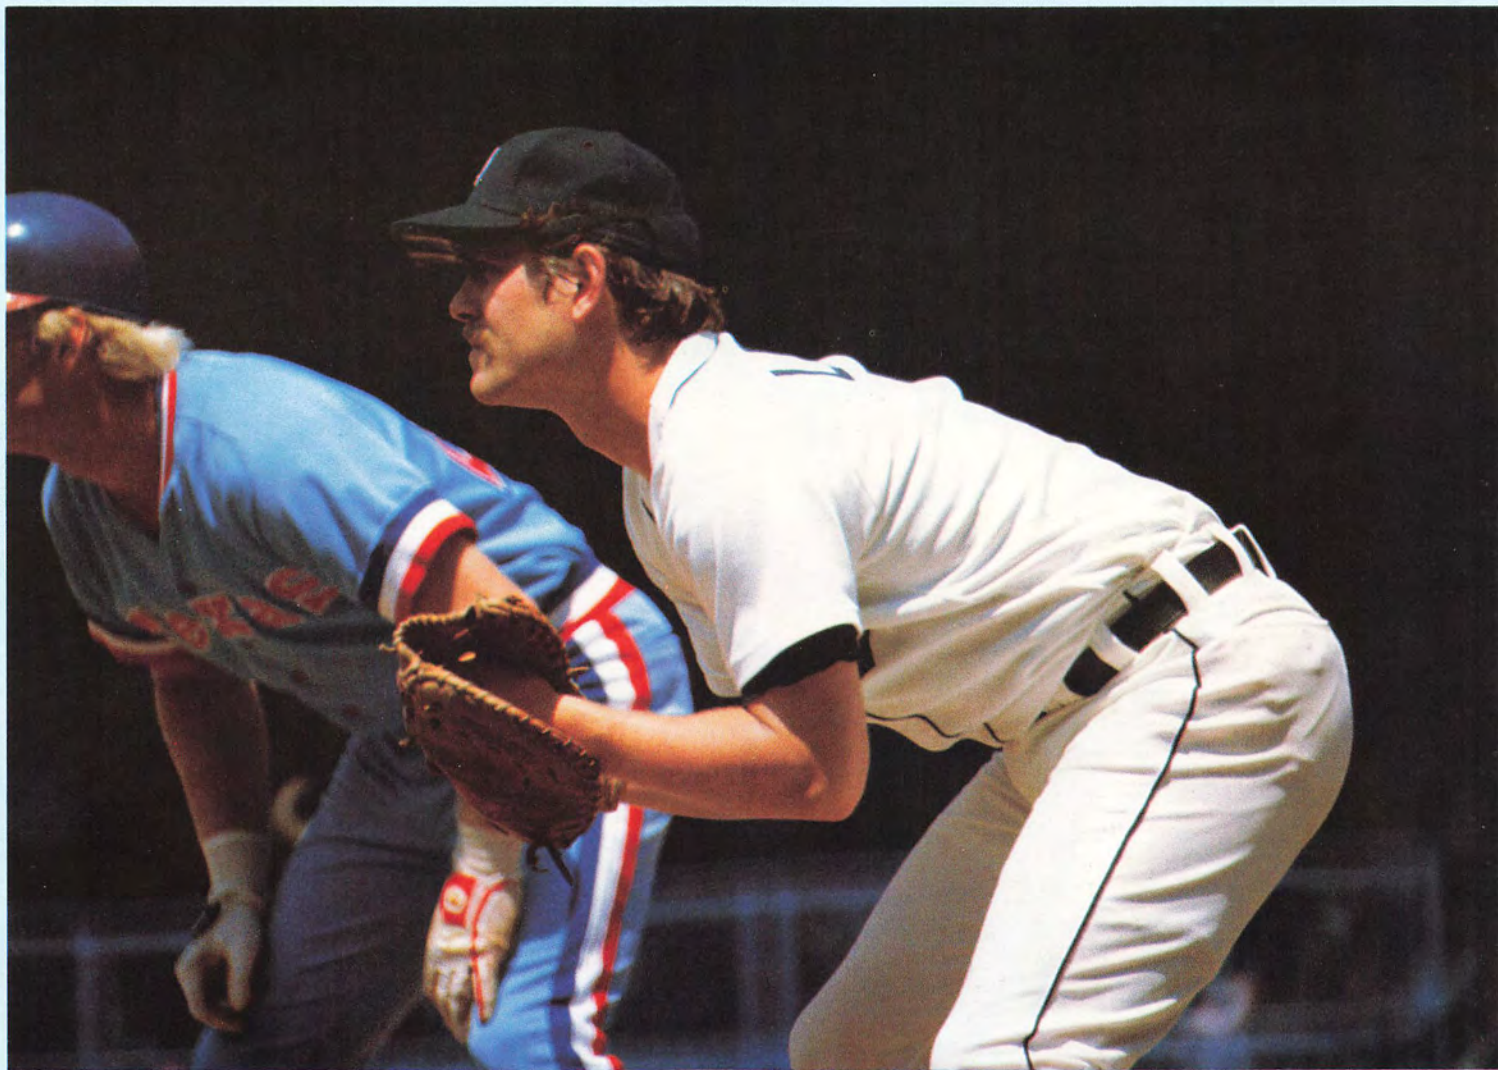

Johnson hit .347 the rest of the season (43 for 124), including a 12-game hitting streak, to finish with a .316 average.

Johnson, who played third base and right field at Detroit, had been Evansville's top hitter with a .317 average, 23 homers and 67 RBI.

The Tigers' No. 1 choice in the 1979 January secondary draft, Johnson led Florida State league third basemen in fielding in 1980.

Howard Johnson

Rick Leach

Oh, what might have happened last year had Leach not suffered from a sore left shoulder?

He had won the starting first base job in spring training based on his fine hitting, but ended up as a spot starter and sometimes outfielder once the ailment ruined his progress.

The former record-setting University of Michigan football quarterback from Flint, who gave up a possible pro football career to sign with the Tigers as their No. 1 draft choice in June, 1979, remains a top prospect.

He has developed into a fine defensive first baseman and has shown he can hit for power.

The left-handed hitting Leach, who first played with Detroit in 1981, was Evansville's most valuable player in 1980 when he hit .272 with 117 hits, 14 doubles, five homers, 58 RBI, and 76 walks.

Dave
Rozema

"Rosie" is Detroit's resident free spirit.

Noted for occasional indiscretions off the field, but also as a determined and talented pitcher on the field, he was off to a great start last year. But he injured his left knee in a fight with Minnesota on May 14. Before that he was 3-0 with a 1.63 ERA.

After surgery to repair torn cartilage and ligaments, he spent the rest of 1982 recuperating.

Although Manager Sparky Anderson wasn't expecting Rozema to be ready to play early this season, he had hopes his recovery might be swift enough that Rozema might be ready by summer.

Rozema, a 26-year-old right-hander from Grand Rapids, is one of the Tigers with the longest time of service. Signed in January, 1975, after being Detroit's fourth choice in the secondary draft, he took just two years to reach the majors.

He has been with the Tigers full time for six years, being utilized both in relief and as a starter and compiling a 42-37 record with an impressive 3.33 ERA.

Rozema was Tiger Rookie of the Year and AL Rookie Pitcher of the Year in 1977 when he went 15-7 with a 3.09 ERA.

Kevin Saucier

A return to his 1981 form would be just what the doctor ordered for Saucier — and the Tigers. That's when he, in his first season with Detroit, turned in a brilliant 1.65 earned-run-average and had 13 saves to go with a 4-2 record.

Erratic control hampered him last year, although he was 3-1 with a 3.12 ERA in 31 games before being optioned to Evansville on July 26.

Saucier's colorful gyrations in celebrations after saving games has made him a popular figure with Detroit fans.

The lefty from Pensacola, Fla., broke into pro ball in 1974. In 1980 he appeared in two Championship Series and one World Series game for Philadelphia. He was traded to Texas in November, 1980, then dealt to the Tigers the next month for shortstop Mark Wagner.

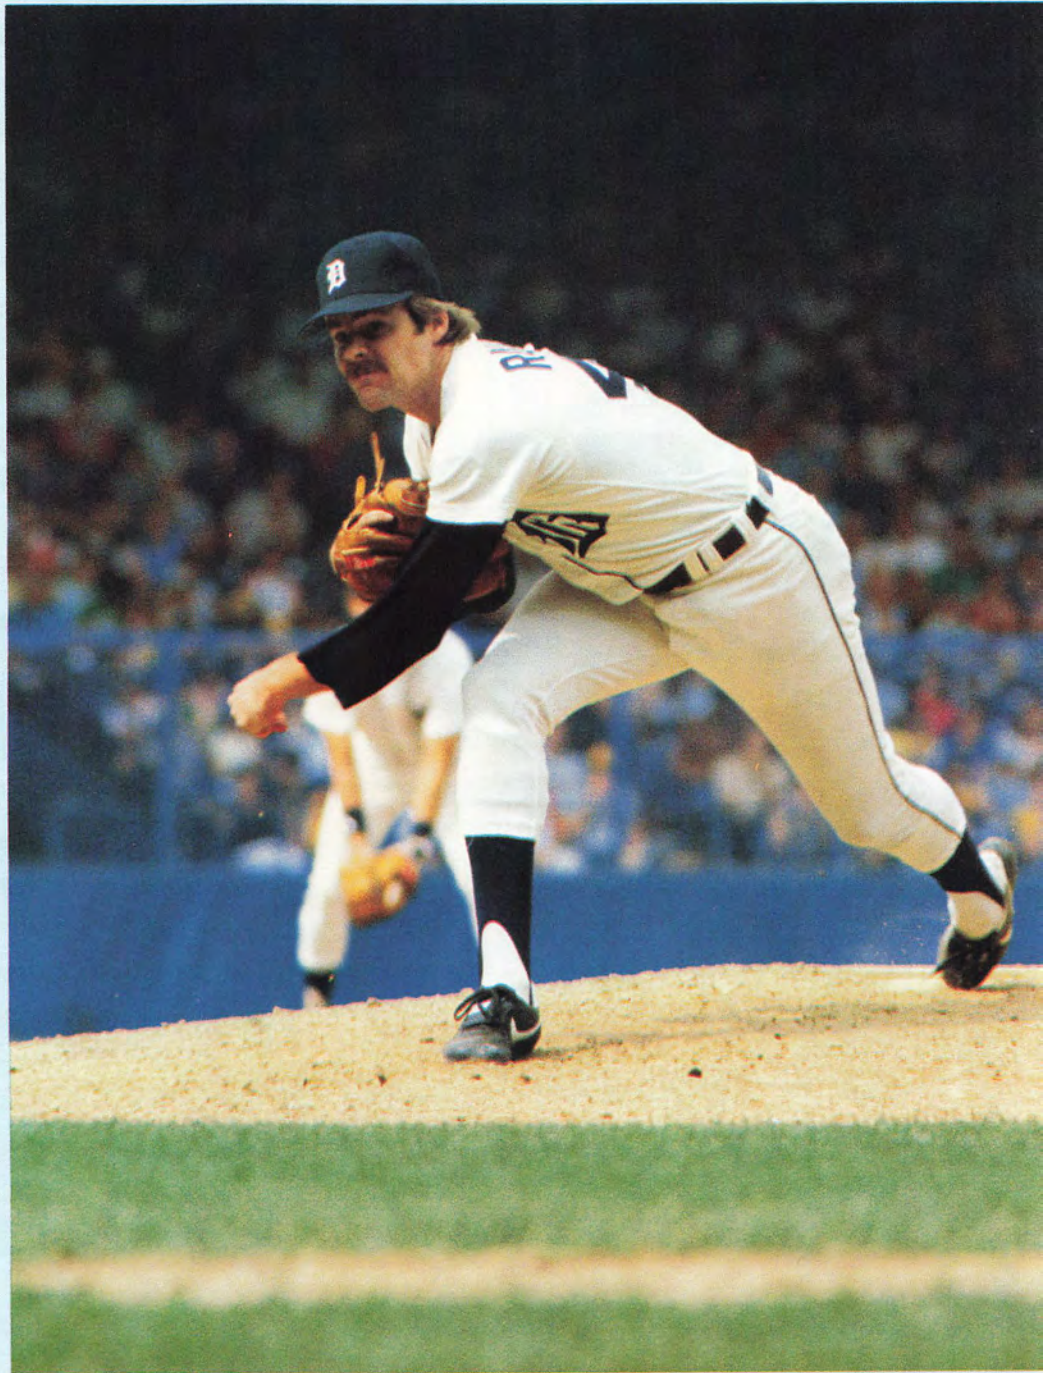

The way he came on late last season gave Detroit reason to believe Rucker might fit in as a regular left-handed starting pitcher in 1983.

He won his last three decisions and had a 0.47 ERA in his last four appearances. Four of Rucker's 27 appearances were starts and he finished with a 5-6 record and 3.38 ERA.

Rucker, from Rialto, Calif., was Detroit's 16th draft choice in June, 1978. Until he was recalled from Evansville on July 4 last year, he had spent all his time in the Tiger system — except for two games with Detroit in April, 1981.

Rucker was 2-0 with a 0.00 ERA in three games against Baltimore in 1982. His first major league triumph came July 25 against Texas.

Dave Rucker

Only 30 years old, yet the big right-handed hitter already has been in the major leagues 11 years.

The Tigers signed him as a free agent in May of last year after he was released by Houston. It was a coup for Detroit, as Ivie clubbed 14 homers and drove in 38 runs in 80 games.

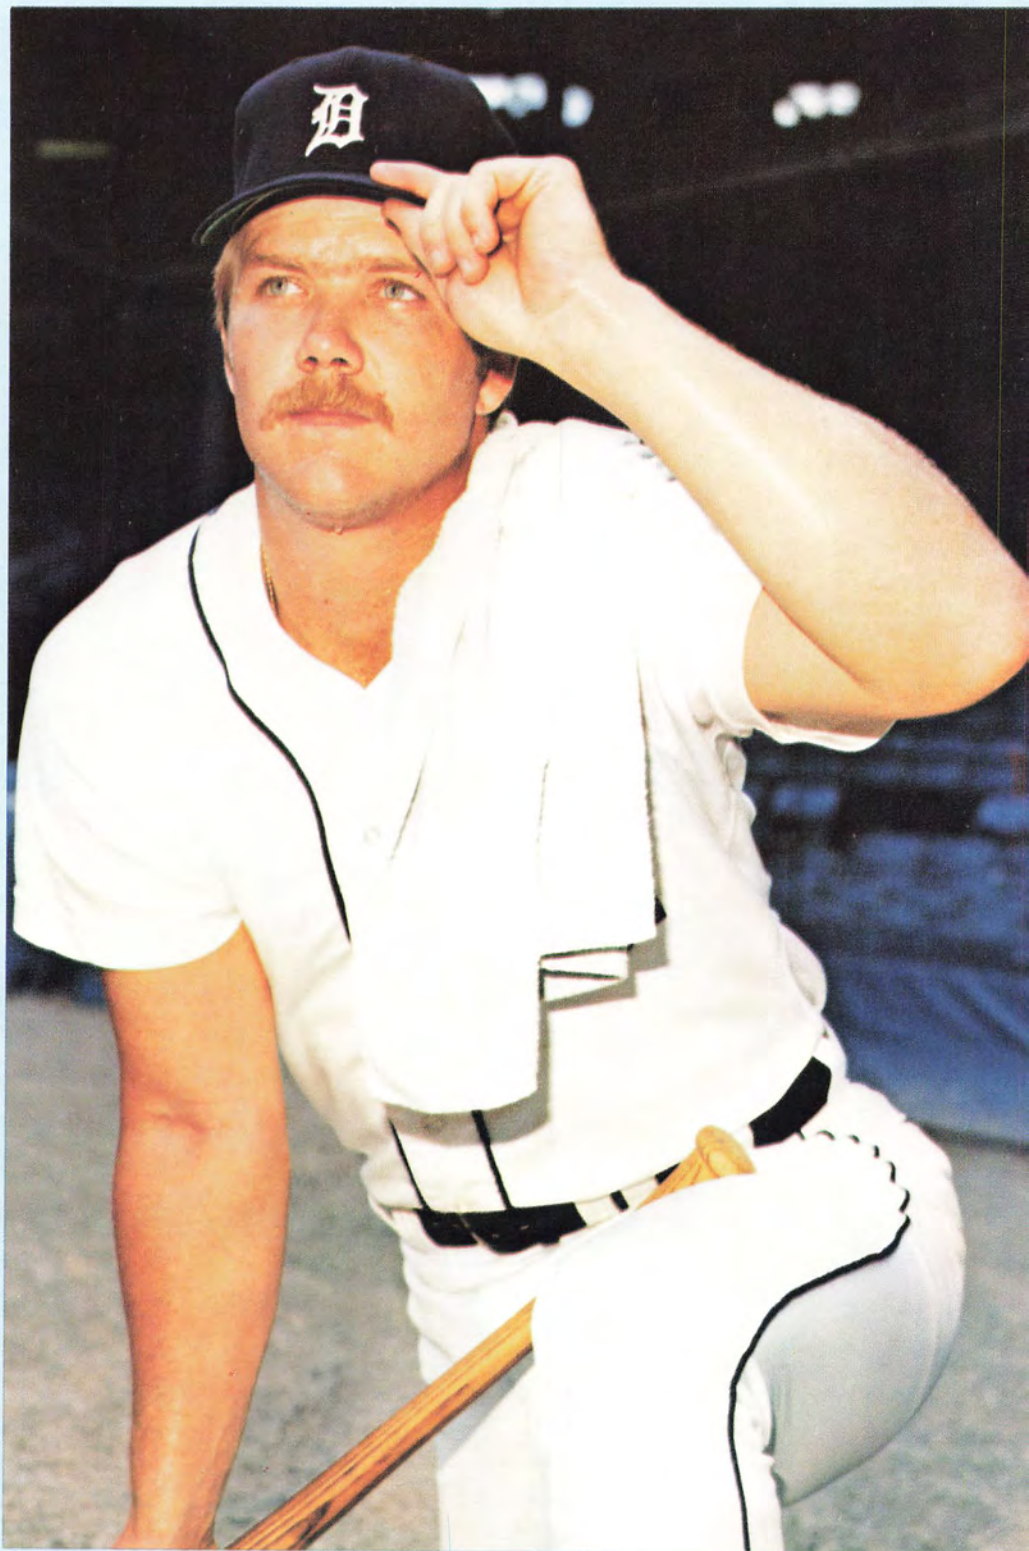

Although serving as designated hitter, Ivie may get back to playing some at first base.

The 6-4, 215-pounder from Stone Mountain, Ga., had three four-RBI games last season.

Ivie was the nation's No. 1 pick in the 1970 June draft, making his major league debut at age 19 with San Diego in 1971. He was named to the Topps and Baseball Digest All-Rookie teams in 1975.

In 1978 he set a major league mark by slamming two pinch hit grand slam home runs. He tied an NL mark the previous season by smacking five doubles in a double-header.

Ivie was an All-American at Walker High School in Atlanta, batting .565, with 21 homers in 21 games his senior year.

The Lincoln Park native, a graduate of Michigan State, earned a spot on the Tigers in spring training last year and made his major league debut with a start April 19 against Kansas City. His first triumph came April 24, a 7-2 decision over New York.

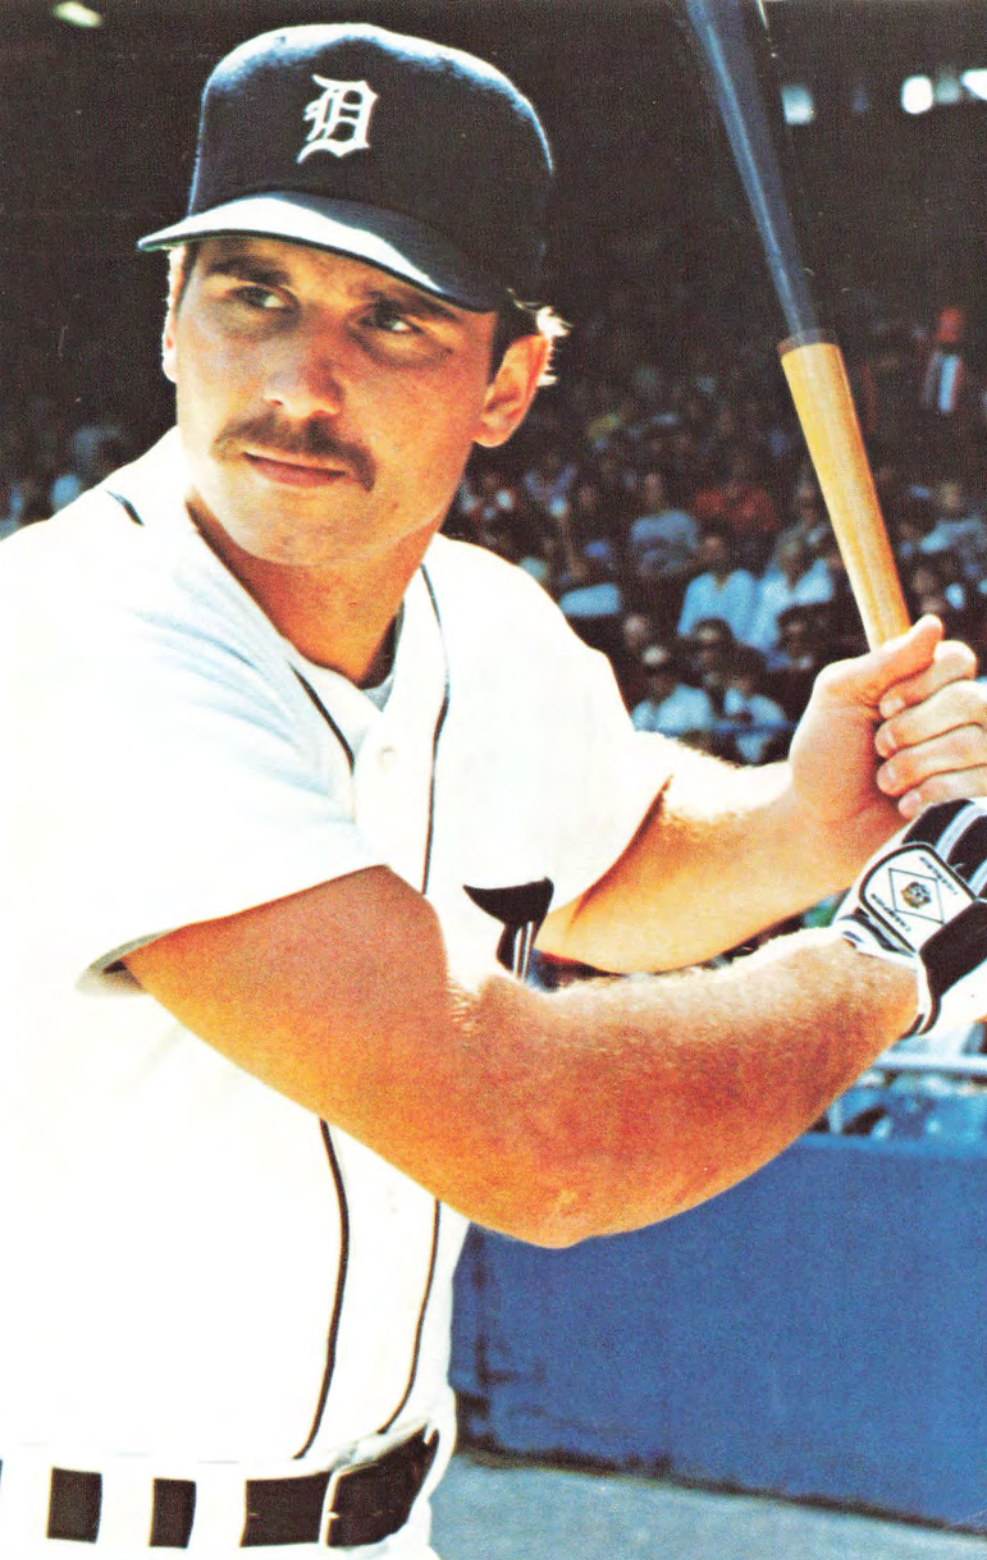

A 6-3, 200-pound right-hander signed as an undrafted free agent in January, 1979, Pashnick made 15 relief appearances and 13 starts (interrupted by a brief sojourn to Evansville) and wound up with a respectable rookie season record of 4-4 with a 4.01 ERA.

He led the American Association with a 2.89 ERA and tied for the lead with four shutouts in 1981 at Evansville. He threw a no-hitter against Iowa, Aug. 19, 1981.

Larry Pashnick

Mike Laga

There's a crowd at first base this season for the Tigers, but Laga has so much promise that it will be difficult to ignore the left-handed hitting former No. 1 Detroit draft choice (January, 1980)

The 22-year-old rookie from Ramsey, N.J., set an Evansville record last year by belting 34 home runs, including three in one game and five in a three-game stretch. The impressive power of the 22-year-old former Fairleigh Dickinson University (New Jersey) student prompted the Tigers to purchase his contact from Evansville last Sept. 1.

He hit .261 in 88 at bats, with three homers and 11 RBI. One of his home runs was off the third deck facing in right field, a target many feel he could hit often.

Laga has combined for 65 homers and driven in 176 runs the last two seasons, at Birmingham and Evansville.

Aurelio Lopez

A return to his 1979 and 1980 form would put Lopez back in the class with the top relief pitchers in the game.

And there were some indications from last season that the achievement certainly is possible.

In 1979 and 1980 the burly Mexican right-hander earned the nickname "Señor Smoke" by combining for a 23-11 record and 42 saves. He was used as a spot starter and reliever in 1981, then last season arm trouble hampered him and he was optioned to Evansville to work himself back into condition.

And what a job he did, posting a 4-0 record and impressive 1.76 ERA.

After being recalled Sept. 1, he was 2-0 with three saves and a 0.77 ERA in five appearances.

Lopez, in pro baseball since 1967, came to Detroit in December, 1978, in a trade with St. Louis.

The Broadcasters

ERNIE HARWELL AND PAUL CAREY

GEORGE KELL AND AL KALINE

When Tiger fans can't make it to the ballpark, more than likely they tune in to the radio broadcasts of the games by Ernie Harwell and Paul Carey.

And if the games happen to be on television, they watch and listen to Al Kaline and George Kell.

But a cursory look in the Tiger Stadium stands will find many in attendance with a radio to their ear, still listening to Carey and Harwell. And there even have been superfans with small TVs on their laps at the ballpark.

The broadcasting chores are clearly in qualified hands.

Harwell, whose broadcast background goes back to 1940, has been broadcasting Tigers games since 1960. He was inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame in 1981.

Carey brought his mellifluous tones to Tiger radio audiences in 1973. He has been assistant sports director of Station WJR since 1958 and his air experience dates back to 1949.

Kaline, former star Tiger right fielder who was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1980, has been Kell's TV sidekick full-time since 1977.

Kell, former Tiger third baseman, was named to the Hall of Fame this year by the veterans' committee. He has been on the television team since 1959 (except for 1964).

Originating station for the television network is WDIV (channel 4). It has been the Tiger flagship station since 1975, but actually carried some games as far back as 1947 when it was called WWJ-TV.

On radio, WJR (760) has been the originating station since 1965. It feeds a network of nearly 50 stations.

Bill Fahey

A native Detroiter who graduated from Redford Union high school and attended the University of Detroit and St. Clair Community College, Fahey took a circuitous route before "coming home."

The left-handed hitting catcher's first major league appearance was in 1971 with the old Washington Senators — who moved to Texas in 1972. Fahey became a regular Ranger in 1975 as a backup catcher. He became a starter with San Diego late in the 1979 season and hit .318 in that role (41 for 129), including a 5-for-5 game at Houston.

The Tigers purchased his contract in March, 1981, and the past two seasons he has been a valuable backup catcher.

Last year he stifled Oakland's Rickey Henderson on Henderson's first bid for a record 119th stolen base. It was one of eight times in 17 attempts Fahey had nailed someone trying to steal.

A sore right knee sidelined him from April 12 until June 19. It was one of a series of injuries that have hindered his career. Others were: a broken hand (1975), broken nose (1974), broken ribs (1973), and punctured lung (1973).

KURT SCHNEIDER

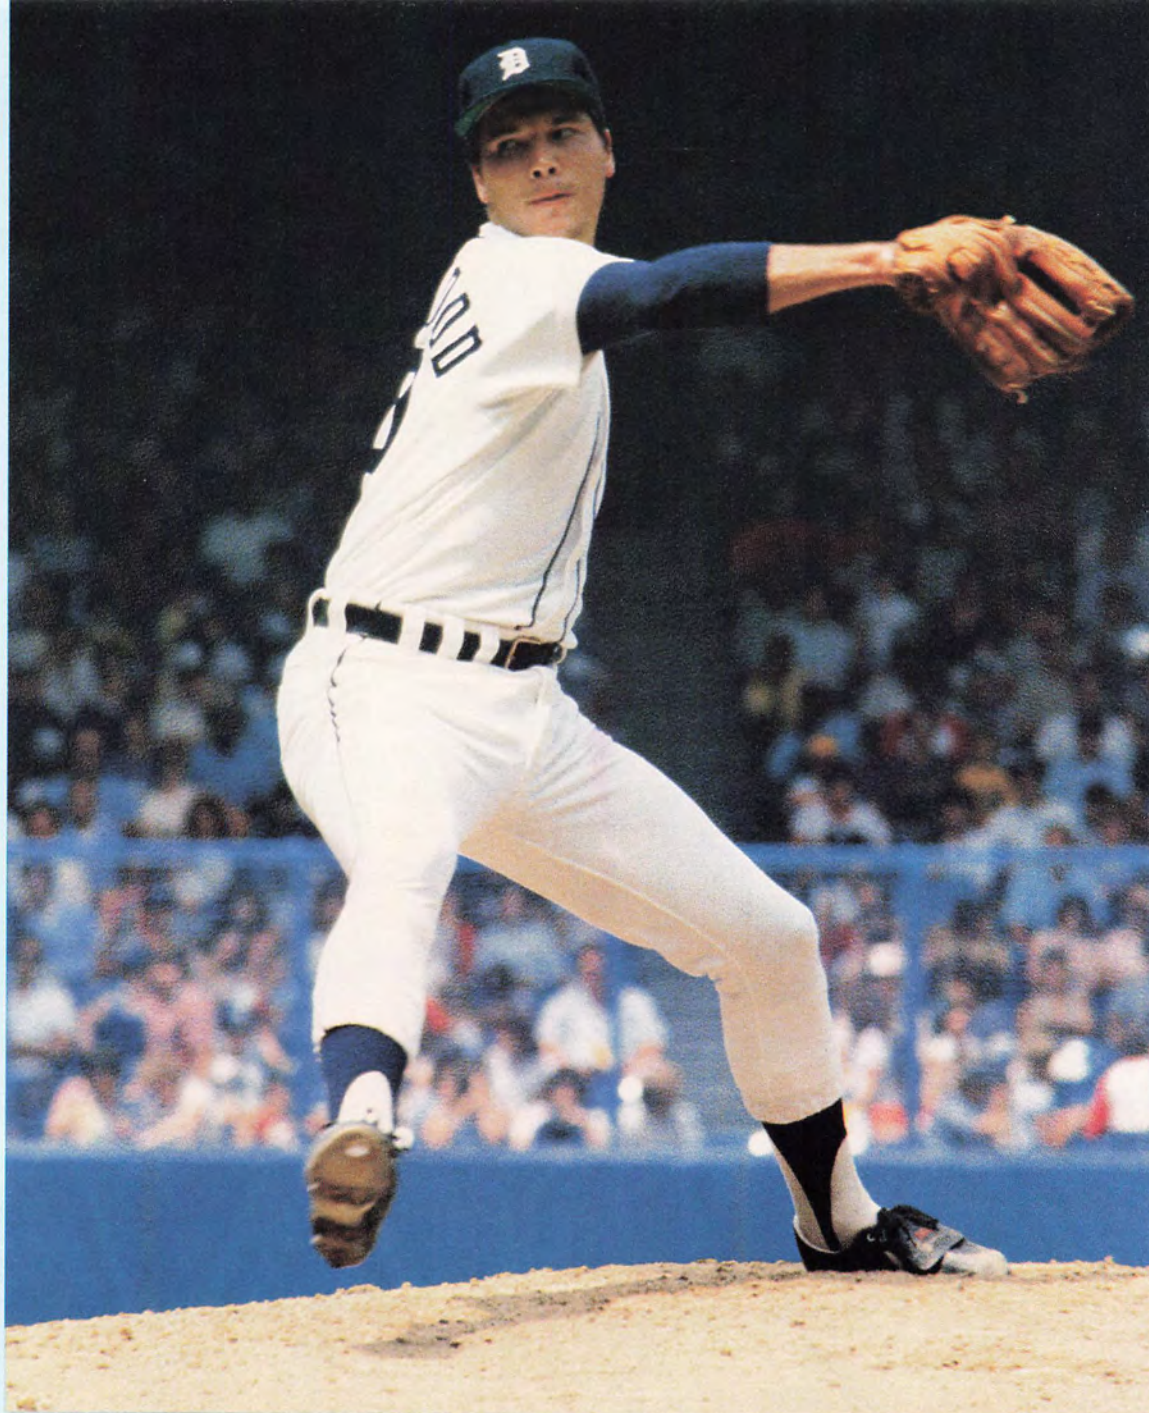

PHIL GUASTELLA

Pat Underwood

Underwood's got plenty going for him, besides a good fastball. He's also a left-hander and doesn't walk many batters, assets that make the former No. 1 Detroit draft choice (June, 1976) a valuable Tiger pitching commodity.

He had a disappointing 1982 campaign (4-8 record, 4.28 ERA), but has shown he has the ability to do well. The best evidence of that came in his storybook major league debut, May 31, 1979, when he started against brother Tom at Toronto, pitched 8½ innings and won a 1-0 decision in a big pressure situation.

Last year he allowed only 22 walks in 99 innings and had 43 strikeouts, his ratio of walks to strikeouts was second best on the team.

Underwood, from Kokomo, Ind., fired a four-hit complete game in April against Kansas City. In August he had another complete game against the Royals.

The affable Thiel College (Pennsylvania) graduate has been a steady utility outfielder for the Tigers since 1979. Despite sporadic duty, the right-handed hitting Jones has been able to hit well when he's played — and his defensive ability is a significant asset.

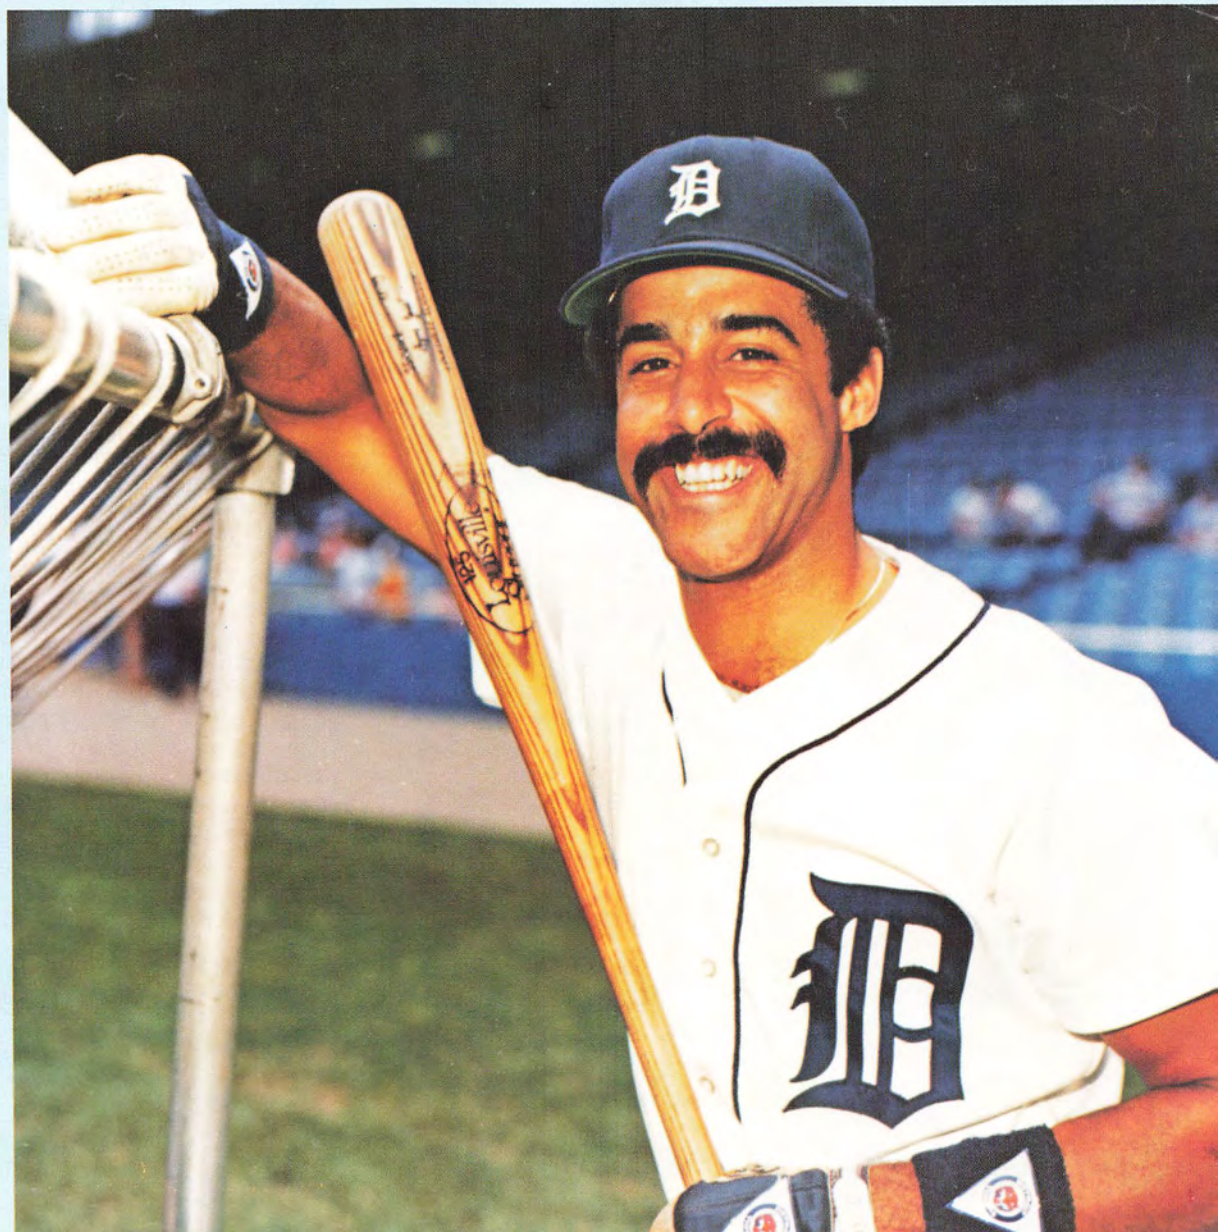

The 30-year-old veteran of nine years in pro ball had an eight-game hitting streak during a starting role last summer when injuries shelved some regulars. He had two hits in a game 10 times and had a four-RBI game at Milwaukee.

Jones, whose brother Darryl played for the 1979 New York Yankees, was voted 1979 Tiger Rookie of the Year by Detroit sportscasters.

The Tigers drafted him from the Cincinnati organization in December, 1978.

Lynn Jones

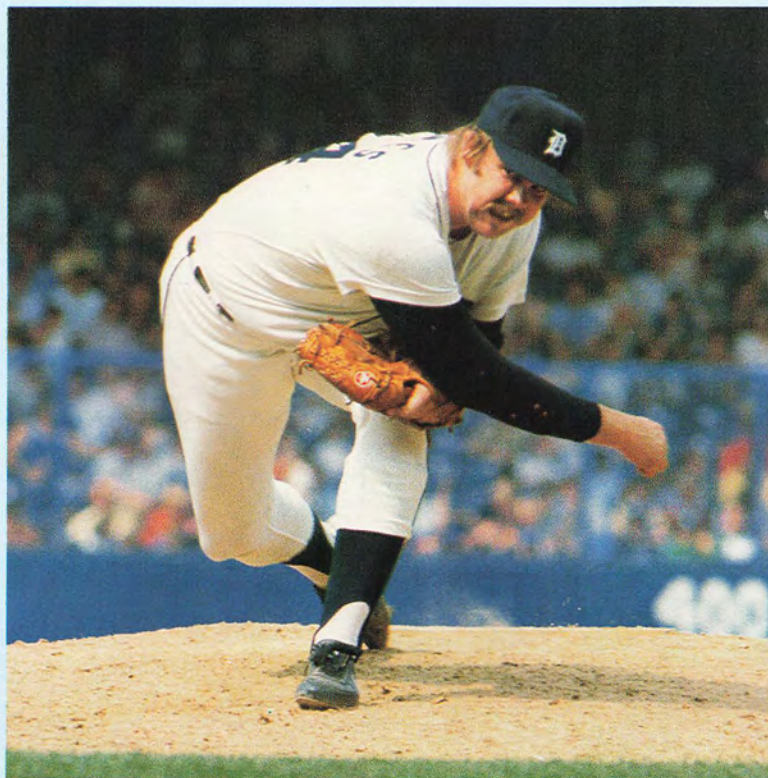

Bob James

The husky (6-4, 230) right-handed pitcher from Sunland, Calif., originally was a catcher. But he has been a pitcher since turning pro in 1976.

Although he has appeared in only 25 games in the majors, 13 with Montreal in 1978, 1979, and 1982, and 12 with Detroit last year, James is not a rookie. The Tigers bought his contract from Evansville last July 26. He had been signed by Detroit in June after Montreal released him.

The 24-year-old power pitcher had 20 strikeouts in just $19\frac{2}{3}$ innings. Of his 120 minor league appearances, 107 were as a starter. He has been used primarily as a reliever in the major leagues.

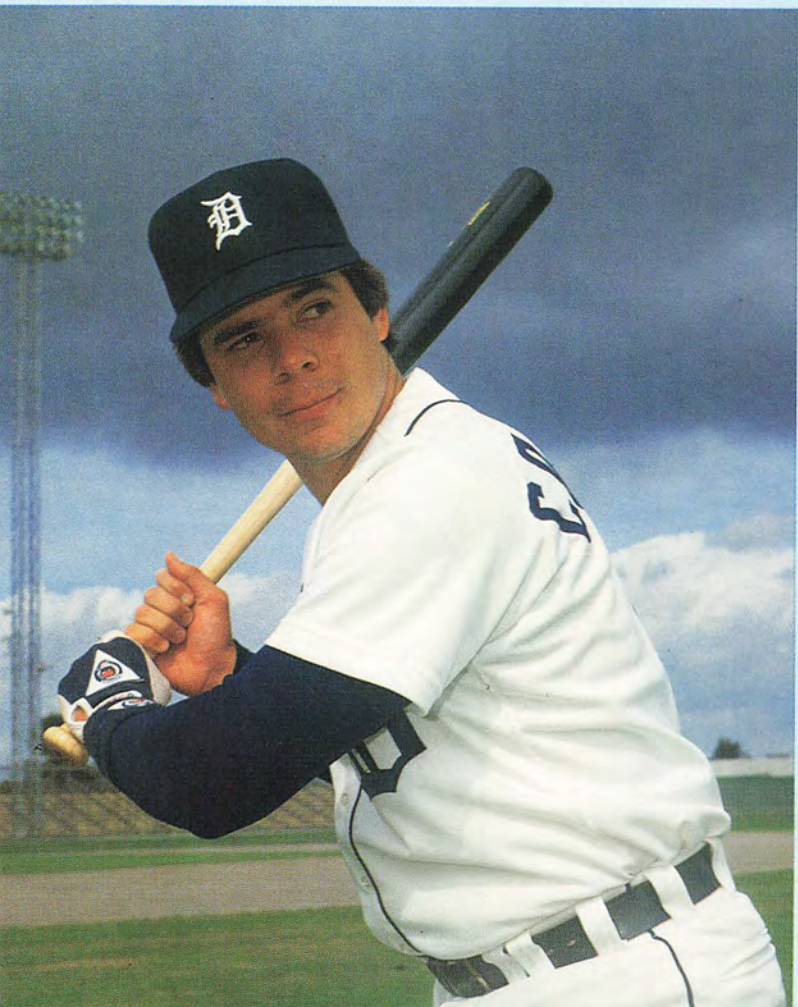

Marty Castillo

He hasn't been able to crack the Tiger regular season roster, except for a handful of games the last two years, but Castillo's versatility and talent make him one of the team's top prospects.

Castillo, 26, is a right-handed hitter from Anaheim, Calif., who has averaged 10 homers, 24 doubles, and 62 RBI the past three seasons at Evansville while catching and playing first and third.

He was a third baseman when the Tigers signed him as their fifth selection in the June, 1978, draft. He was converted to catcher in 1980. With Detroit he has played third and first, as well as behind the plate.

Howard Bailey

The Grand Haven, Mich., native didn't take long to make a big impression on the Tigers after being signed as an undrafted free agent in August, 1978. Within three seasons the left-handed pitcher, a former Grand Valley State College student, was up with the parent club.

Some arm trouble interfered somewhat with his progress two seasons ago. Although he spent some time with Detroit, he was with Evansville most of the season. Last year he became one of the Triplets' stalwarts, logging 26 starts and posting an 11-10 record and 4.16 ERA.

Earning another look-see by Detroit, Bailey made the most of eight relief appearances — he didn't give up an earned run and allowed just six hits after being called up in September.

Bailey earned his first major league save at Cleveland on Oct. 1 with three innings of three-hit relief.

Berenguer, a 5-11, 215-pound right-handed pitcher, has used his bulk to best advantage and has become a strikeout ace.

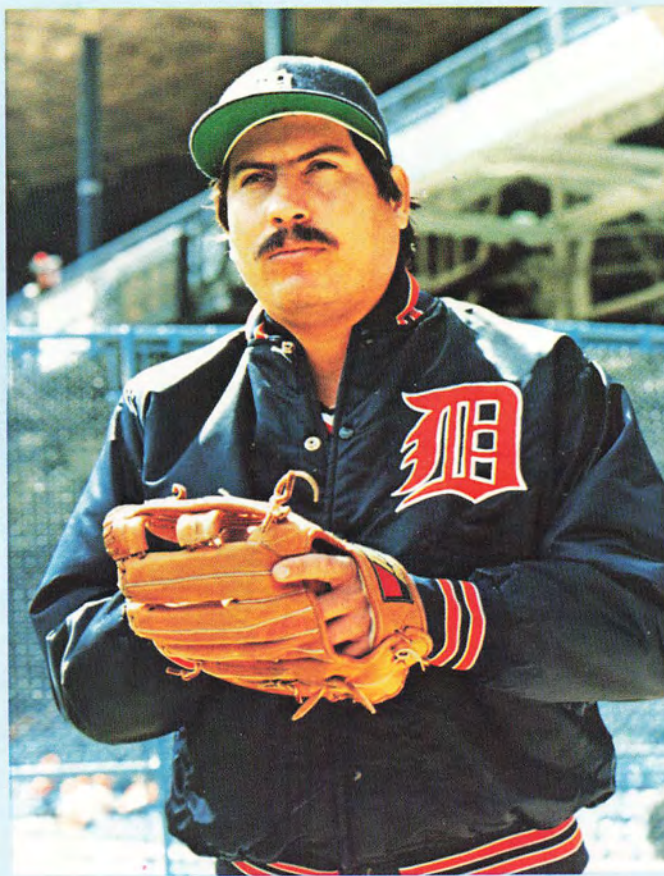

The 28-year-old Panamanian led Evansville with 127 strikeouts last year. (In 1979 he tied the Pacific Coast League record with 220 strikeouts.)

His nine complete games with the Triplets last year made him the co-leader in the American Association. He had an 11-10 record and got a September call from Detroit.

Although Berenguer appeared in just two games with the Tigers, he struck out seven batters in one of the outings.

Berenguer, who broke into pro ball in 1975, has spent part of five seasons in the major leagues — with the New York Mets, Kansas City Royals, Toronto Blue Jays, and Detroit. The Tigers signed him in April, 1982, as a free agent.

Juan Berenguer

Stine Poole

Although playing first base in 68 games and catcher only 26 at Birmingham, Evansville used him strictly as a catcher in 16 games.

Poole, from San Diego, was the Tigers' No. 8 selection in the June, 1980, draft.

Poole's performance at Birmingham last season, his third in pro ball, was solid enough to earn him a spot on the Evansville roster for 16 games and put him on Detroit's winter roster.

The right-handed hitting graduate of the University of the Pacific set personal highs in at bats (351), runs (46), hits (90), home runs (18), and RBI (60) at Birmingham.

One of every 10 runs-batted-in in his career have been game winners.

A graduate of Aquinas College in Grand Rapids, Mich., Gumpert was signed by Detroit as a free agent in November, 1980.

It took just two seasons for the right-handed hurler to play for the Tigers, getting in five games last September.

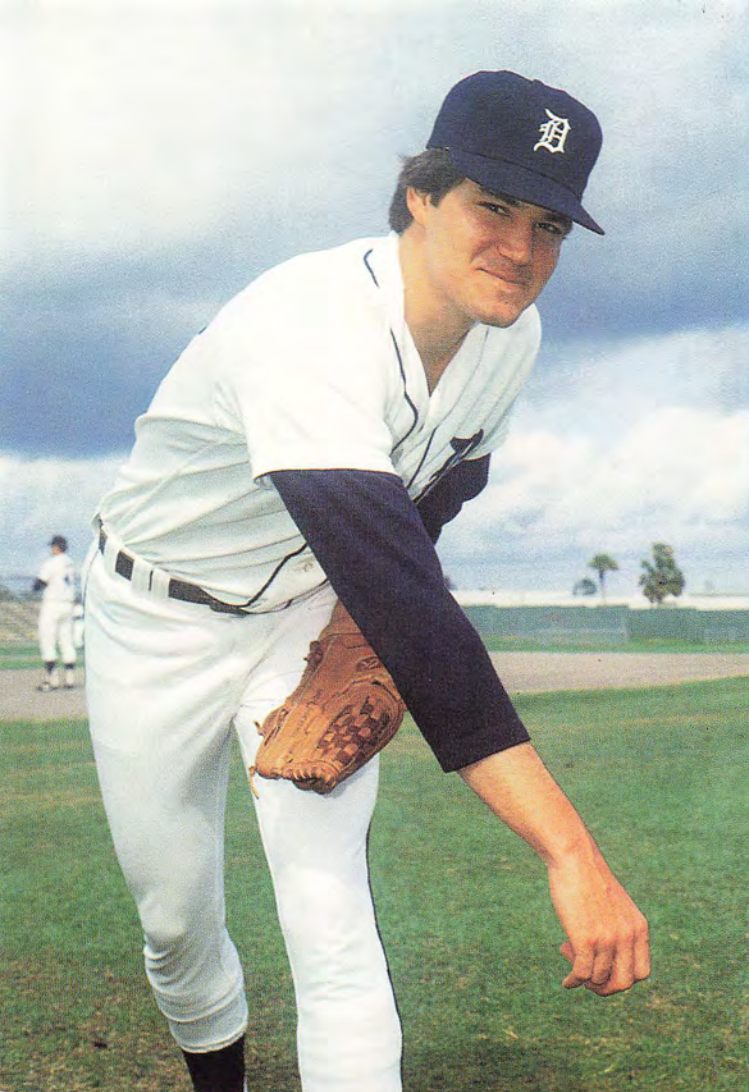

He was at three levels of ball in 1981, Lakeland (8-5, 2.50 ERA), Birmingham (6-3), and Evansville. At Birmingham last year he had a 9-6 record, 14 saves, and a superb 2.17 ERA over 42 games. He earned a promotion to Evansville, missing the Southern League All-Star game as a result of the call-up.

Gumpert was 1-0 with Evansville before the Tigers bought his contract on July 23. He was a starter in 1981 and was converted to relief last year.

Gumpert's first major league save came in August when he got the Yankees to hit into a double play to end the game.

Dave Gumpert

Charlie Nail

A big (6-4, 210 pounds) right-handed pitcher from Jackson, Miss., Nail earned a spot on the Tigers' winter roster after a 9-6 record and team-leading 3.34 ERA as a starter at Birmingham last year.

Although a "control" pitcher who issued just 46 walks in 143 innings, Nail also racked up 109 strikeouts.

Detroit drafted him on the eighth round in June, 1979. He has spent time at Bristol, Lakeland, and Macon.

When the Tigers chose Dacko as their 31st selection in the June, 1980, draft, who could have imagined he'd be on Detroit's roster in 1983? But a steady and impressive climb in the system put the 6-foot-4 right-handed pitcher on Detroit's roster during the past winter.

He had a fine 1.17 ERA with his first minor league team, Bristol of the Appalachian League, in 1980. He stepped up to Lakeland of the Florida State League, then, in 1981 at Birmingham of the Southern League, he posted a 13-7 record in 27 starts.

Last year at Evansville of the AAA American Association the 24-year-old Pennsylvania native was 12-10 with a 4.16 ERA in 26 games, all starts. His 173 innings topped the Triplets.

Dacko is a graduate of James Madison University in Virginia.

Mark Dacko

German Barranca

Barranca has had four seasons of brief major league experience (Kansas City, Cincinnati), but the 26-year-old second baseman from Mexico still is waiting for his big break.

The left-handed hitter, obtained from the Cincinnati organization last September, started the season with the Reds and was used mostly as a pinch hitter before being sent to their Indianapolis farm team.

Through the 1982 campaign he had 199 steals in eight years of minor league duty, including 75 at Omaha in 1979. Barranca led American Association second basemen in 1981 with a .989 fielding average.

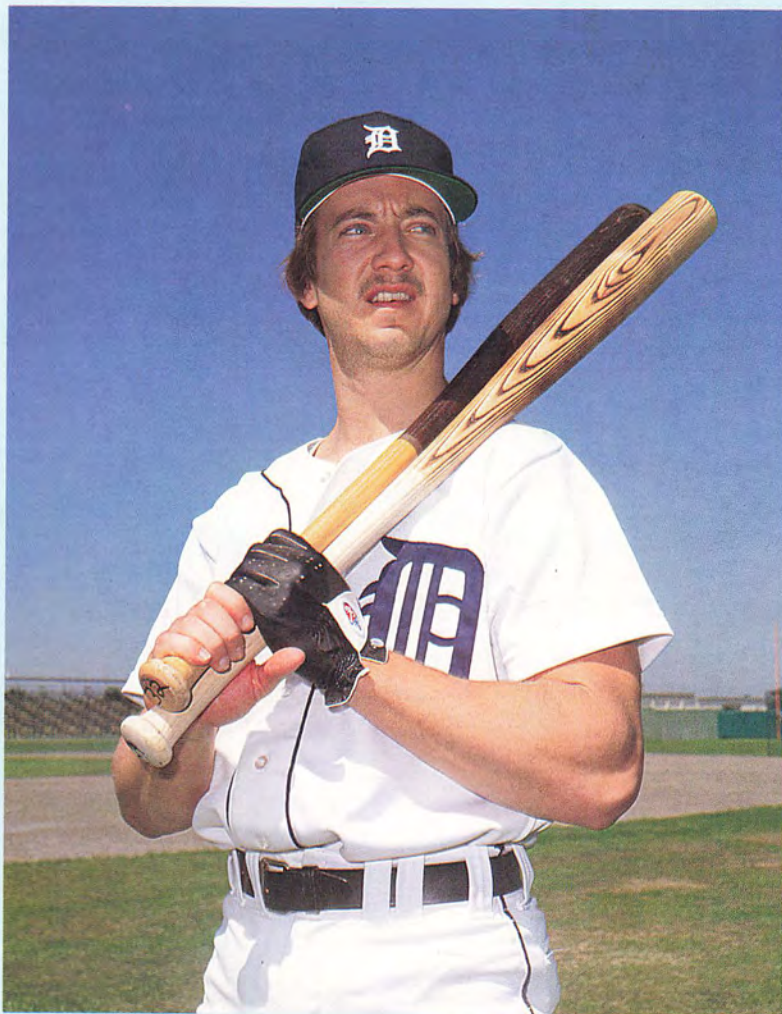

Jeff Kenaga

A left-handed hitting outfielder and Western Michigan University graduate, Kenaga has been in the Tigers' system since 1979.

He played for four different teams, reaching the Triple-A level last season with Evansville where he set professional highs by scoring 60 runs, belting 29 doubles and 18 homers, while driving in 68 runs.

Kenaga, who was born in Detroit and lives in Dearborn Heights, is a graduate of Detroit's Lutheran West High School. He was the Tigers' 16th selection in the 1979 June draft.

Kenaga hit .301 at Birmingham in 1981 and in three full seasons in the farm system has averaged 25 doubles, 15 homers, and 63 RBI.

Ken Baker

Baker, 28, is a left-handed hitting outfielder who has spent six seasons in the minor leagues. Impressive statistics in each of them make him a good prospect.

His best season was last year at Birmingham where he led the Southern League in hitting with a .342 average, clouting 13 home runs and knocking in 70.

The Tigers signed him as a free agent in June, 1981, after the New York Yankees released him following his "poorest" season, 1980, at Nashville where he hit .286.

Baker has averaged .298 in four years as a Yankee farmhand and his overall minor league batting average is .308.

Barbaro Garbey

Sparky Anderson was impressed by Garbey the first time he saw him swing a bat at training camp in Lakeland, Fla.

Garbey, a right-handed hitting outfielder from Santiago, Cuba, was signed by the Tigers as an undrafted free agent in June, 1980.

With Birmingham last season he was named to the Southern League All-Star team, hitting .298 for the year, with 32 doubles, 17 home runs, and 99 RBI.

Those are impressive statistics, particularly in view of the fact Garbey was hit in the face with a pitch the previous season, suffering a broken jaw and missing much of the second half of Birmingham's season.

A thumb injury shortened his 1982 season by 13 games.

The 26-year-old, who came to the United States from Cuba on the "Freedom Flotilla" in the spring of 1980, made his U.S. baseball debut with Lakeland that year and hit .364 in 26 games.

GEHRINGER AND GREENBERG

YET ONE MORE HONOR FOR NO. 2

The contrast was as significant as a line drive to a long high fly.

But the two complemented each other like blue skies on a sunny day. No. 2 with his slashing liners. No. 5 with his powerful long blasts. Individually they were outstanding. Together . . . supreme.

Charlie Gehringer, Detroit's all-time No. 2 and Hank Greenberg, with his famous No. 5, both gained baseball immortality by induction into the Hall of Fame.

The storied Tigers will receive yet one more honor when their uniform numbers are retired, never again to be worn by a Detroit player. They join Al Kaline, celebrated No. 6, as the only Tiger players to have their numbers retired.

The Gehring-Greenberg

ceremony will take place between games of a Sunday, June 12 double-header with Cleveland. And players from the Tiger World Series teams of 1934, 1935 and 1940 have been invited back to share in the celebration.

With Gehringer at second base and Greenberg at first, the Tigers captured the pennant in those three years. In 1935, they beat Chicago for the world championship.

Gehringer was a magician. And a ball player's ball player.

"They wind Gehringer up at the start of the season and he never runs down," commented long-time Tiger adversary and Hall of Fame Pitcher Lefty Gomez.

"He hits .354 on opening day and he hits .354 the rest of the season. Whenever you played the Tigers, you'd look up and he'd be on base."

Gehringer didn't hit .354 all the time. But he did compile a lusty .321 lifetime average and batted exactly the same in the three World Series he played. In six All-Star Games he batted .500 and in 1937, he won the American League batting title with an average of .373. He was named the league's Most Valuable Player that year.

Gehringer was more than a great hitter. Ball players appreciated his talents even more than the public because he ranged far and effortlessly to make difficult plays appear routine. He possessed rare baseball instinct.

A manager's dream, Gehringer always was in the lineup. And his conduct always has been beyond reproach.

Gehringer finished with a .320 average for 19 seasons and collected 2,839 hits. In seven seasons he collected more than 200 hits. He knocked in more than 100 runs on seven occasions and scored more than 100 in 12 years. He was voted into the Hall of Fame in 1949.

While Gehringer's grace was unmatched, Greenberg's power was awesome. He was one of the most feared right-handed hitters in the history of the game.

Greenberg simply overpowered opposing pitchers and finished with 331 home runs, despite losing four prime years because of World War II. Greenberg led the league in homers four times. He slammed 58 homers in 1938 to share the all-time mark for right-handers with Jimmie Foxx.

In 1934 Greenberg belted 26 home runs, knocked in 139 runs and posted a .339 average as the Tigers won their first pennant in 25 years. The following year when they went on to win the World Series, he blasted 36 homers, knocked in 170 runs and batted .328.

Until the war interrupted his career, Greenberg was on his way to compiling super lifetime marks. In May of 1941, after playing in 19 games, he was inducted into the Army. He received his discharge in December. Following the attack on Pearl Harbor, the Tiger slugger enlisted again and was away from baseball for four years.

The four years were critical to his career because at the time, Greenberg was 31.

Nevertheless, Greenberg finished with a .313 lifetime average to go along with his 1,276 RBI and 1,051 runs scored. He was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1956.

Two-time Cy Young Award winner Denny McLain, one of the heroes of Detroit's 1968 World Series championship team, had a day in his honor at Tiger Stadium last season. In the photo below he's about to sign an autograph for Tiger catcher Bill Fahey in the clubhouse.

You can't start 'em too young, seems to be Enos Cabell's approach in the photo to the left as he gives some tips to his son Stephen, 2, at last season's popular Father-Son game.

One of the more popular features is the visit by The Chicken (above). And the vendors at Tiger Stadium have their own following, as well, as they walk through the stands with a wide assortment of wares.

The quality of players at the top often can be traced to a major league team's scouting system. And based on the caliber of players who have made it to the Tigers in recent years, that scouting system appears to be performing very well.

New this year as Scouting Director is George Bradley, who last season was one of nine full-time Tiger scouts. This year there are 12, plus three professional consultants.

The three newcomers are: Rick Arnold, John "Red" Barkley, and Bart Braun.

The three pro consultants are names well-known to Tiger fans for many years: Rick Ferrell, Frank Skaff, and Jack Tighe.

The Farms

Detroit's top farm club, the Evansville Triplets of the AAA American Association, will have a number of new faces as usual on the roster — but the most important newcomer is Gordie MacKenzie. He's the new manager.

His appointment tops a list of farm system maneuvers made to utilize the talents of the Tigers' many quality managers.

Roy Majtyka, at Evansville last season, is the new skipper at Class AA Birmingham of the Southern League.

Since Detroit dropped its affiliation with Macon of the South Atlantic League, the Tigers have moved manager Ted Brazell to the Lakeland Tigers of the Class A Florida State League.

Boots Day stays on as manager at Bristol of the Rookie Class Appalachian League. His Tigers there last year finished sixth with a 28-36 record.

New to the minor league coaching corps is veteran minor league Tiger pitcher Ralph Treuel, who will work with Billy Muffett as a farm system pitching coach.

MacKenzie, 45, has been in baseball for 25 years, including 12 as a manager in the minors. Last season he was the third base coach of the Chicago Cubs, while in 1980 and 1981 he was a coach with the Kansas City Royals.

MacKenzie was a catcher with the Kansas City A's in 1961.

Majtyka, 43, guided Evansville to a 68-65 record in 1982, good for fourth place in the East Division.

Macon was fourth in the Southern Division of its league last year under Brazell with a 66-72 record.

Lakeland last year was managed by Bruce Kimm, who has accepted a coaching job this year with the Cincinnati Reds.

Ball Park Franks have been knockin 'em out of the park since 1957.

They plump when you cook 'em.

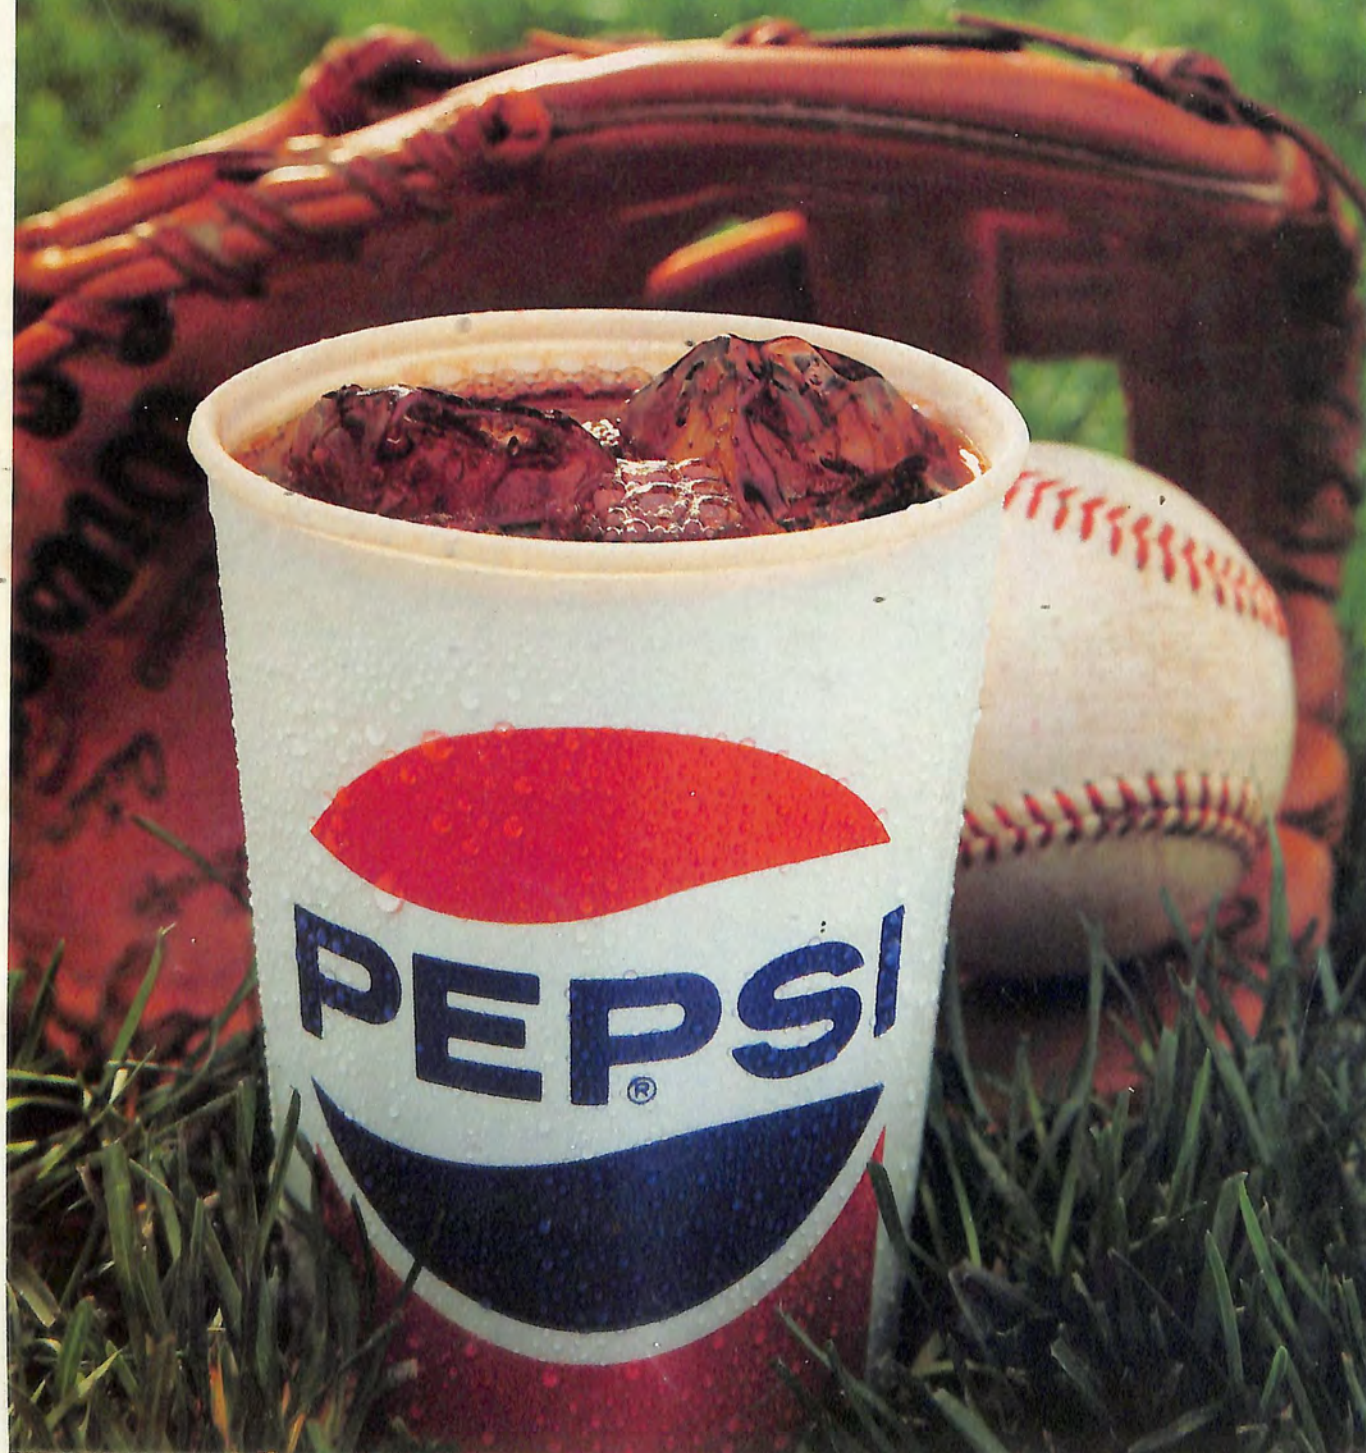

Twenty-five years ago there was a historic meeting at Tiger Stadium. For the first time, thousands of fans met the Ball Park Frank. Most folks can't remember who won or lost the game, but they do remember the hot dog. Ball Park Franks have been a hit at the park ever since. In fact, today most fans wouldn't think of going nine innings without eating at least one. Because when it comes to a great tasting hot dog, Ball Park's the name of the game. They plump when you cook 'em.
